Big Gambler Leaves City On Eve of Investigation

Three Others of 'Big Four' Stay; Pine to Empanel Grand Jury Today

One of the District's "big four" gamblers has hurriedly left town, reportedly taking with him a large amount of cash from his recent "take," The Washington Post learned yesterday on the eve of the special grand jury investigation which begins today.

Three other leaders of Washington's numbers and horse race gambling are reported to be staying here despite the probe. However, it is known that operations are being carried on with extreme caution.

Justice David A. Pine of District Court will proceed today to select and empanel a grand jury of 23 District residents to investigate and probably indict Greater Washington gamblers.

Court officials pointed out that the validity of any subpenas issued by the jury will extend throughout the United States.

Authorized By Laws

It may be Tuesday before United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who requested the investigation, launches his presentation. With the information claimed by Attorney Fay reported to include the names, addresses and records of 145 big gamblers, his outline is expected to continue through Tuesday and perhaps into Wednesday.

The jury, which is summoned for 10 a. m., was authorized April 28 by Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws, after Fay had charged the gamblers in the area were grossing an indicated 100 million dollars a year.

Preparation for the investigation has been featured by an exchange of letters between the United States attorney and Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett over the role of police investigators in the probe.

Fay has maintained that the grand jury should determine whether further police investigation was desired. Barrett and other high police officials are expected to be witnesses.

The correspondence was concluded when they asked for and received the addresses of the gamblers whose names had been furnished by police.

Fay, who is assisted by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly and Charles B. Murray, also has asked and obtained information from the public which has come in by mail, phone and from visitors to his office.

S. C. Senator To Name 'Ike' At Convention

By the United Press

Senator Johnston (D., S. C.), a leader of the South's "Ditch Truman" forces, said yesterday he will nominate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for President at the Democratic National Convention.

It was the first time an important Southern Democrat had pledged himself to a "nominate Eisenhower" move at the convention in Philadelphia July 19. Johnston aired his views in a radio interview with Charles Parmer over WEAM.

Johnston angrily denied the recent assertion of Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath that "there is no revolt" against President Truman in the traditionally Democratic solid South.

He said he could "assure" McGrath that "not one South Carolina delegate to the convention will support Harry Truman." The State will select its convention delegates Wednesday.

Asserting that anti-Truman feeling is strong among Democrats not only in the South but in key Northern States such as New York, Johnston said:

2 Die in Crash As Cargo Plane Loses Rudder

Columbus, Ohio, May 16 (AP).—A twin-engined cargo plane crashed east of Port Columbus airport tonight after losing its rudder.

The pilot and copilot were killed, bringing to four the number of air fatalities in Ohio today. Two Naval Reserve fliers were killed earlier in separate accidents.

Two bodies found in the cargo plane wreckage were identified tentatively through papers as:

W. R. McCaulley, Fort Dodge, Iowa, the pilot, and,

Jack Raymond Foote, Chicago, the copilot.

The naval victims were identified as Lieut. (jg) Theodore Lewis Meyer, 25, of Columbus, and Lieut. (jg) William Smith, 24, of Newark.

Margaret Truman Keeps Score for Bing Crosby

Margaret Truman Flouts Weatherman

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Bing Crosby, whose income loss would dent the Treasury if he ever got a bad cold, went around belting golf balls and singing in the rain yesterday.

It was no lyrical Tin Pan Alley rain, this one. It came from clouds that weren't supposed to be there, and it soaked Bing and Margaret Truman and every other notable that happened to be on the fairways of the Columbia Country Club.

The occasion was the second National Celebrities Golf Tournament, sponsored by The Washington Post to provide more recreational facilities for children.

Despite the delinquency of the weatherman, 6000 turned out to cheer the dripping heroes and heroines who plodded the fairways.

Clark Wields Wicked Wood

Miss Truman, wearing a white flannel coat, endured the downpour until the ninth hole. There she turned over her umbrella to the blithe Mr. Crosby, and headed for the clubhouse.

The tournament started off with a roar of laughter.

Attorney General Tom Clark, whose concern for America's delinquent youth inspired the tournament, hit the first ball. It turned out to be the worst shot since Ring Lardner hit his famous explosion shot from the tee.

Clark, holding his driver as he would a baseball bat, took a roundhouse swing. The ball took off on a southwesterly course, traveled about 20 yards, and landed in a detachment of soldiers, routing them.

Charlie McCarthy in Character

About this time, a robin flew overhead with a worm in its beak, apparently headed for safer territory.

Harry Wismer, crack sports announcer for ABC, stood on No. 1 tee announcing the arrival of the celebrities.

Charlie McCarthy, wearing a silk hat and white tie and tails, came up with Edgar Bergen and immediately began a flirtation with Miss Truman.

"Oh, Margaret," he exclaimed, "you're killing me!"

Bing Crosby came onto the tee wearing gray knickers, a mud-colored sweater, a checkered cap and white shoes. He did a little ballet step and posed for photographers

Dean's 76 Ties Crosby For Amateur Title

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Out of the wackiest and most celebrated golf field ever to tee off in tournament play emerged Golf Star Byron Nelson, screen and radio-famed Bing Crosby and baseball's retired ace, Dizzy Dean, to take top honors in the Washington Post's National Celebrities Tourney yesterday.

Before 6000 celebrity-smitten and rain-smitten spectators at the Columbia Country Club the Nelson-Crosby-Dean trio carried off the tournament Oscars, with a prize, too, for Babe Didrikson Zaharias, leader of the women's division.

Nelson shot the day's most flabbergasting golf, a sparkling three-below-par 67 to beat out Gene Sarazen by three strokes in the pro golfers' division.

The tournament's surprise, though, was the display of Dizzy Dean, unheralded for his golf, who posted 76 for the 18 holes to tie with Crosby for the championship among amateurs.

Mrs. Zaharias, playing in the Czech Flier Says Airmen Deserting In Wholesale Lots

Munich, Germany, May 16 (AP). The British-trained Czechoslovak air force is deserting wholesale and fleeing into Germany, a refugee officer said today.

The officer, a lieutenant whose name is not disclosed for his own safety, said only 5 per cent of the officer corps, which the RAF taught to fly during the war, is Communist-minded.

The airmen are sneaking over the borders by land. It is no longer possible for them to steal planes.

Recently, the informant said, all officers were called in to hear a harangue by politicians. All officers were ordered either to join the party or swear allegiance to it. The response was silence, the informant said.

Col. Reicin, chief of the secret state police in the Czech army, notified the officers that all enlisted men have to team up with the party. The number of Communist corporals rose from 3 to 20.

There are at least 1000 former Czech military men now in Bavaria. Refusing to join the Communists means that they cannot even eat, they said.

UAW Offers to Drop Pay Drive For Ford's Price Rollback Aid

Detroit, May 16 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers today offered to withdraw wage demands against the Ford Motor Co. if the firm will "exert its influence" to effect "a substantial rollback in the cost of living."

The offer came in answer to a wage cut proposed by Ford in the interest of "public security."

At the same time, the UAW challenged Ford to make public "a complete and accurate financial report" to prove that increased wages would boost prices as claimed.

Ford contended yesterday in a letter to the union that announced demands for a 30-cent hourly raise would result in "decreased buying power for the consumer's dollar."

Instead, the company suggested that wage differentials between Ford and the other two major auto firms be eliminated. This was one of five proposals submitted in anticipation of bargaining sessions due to begin before July 15.

In a prepared statement, Ken Bannon, national UAW Ford director, accused Ford of joining industry "in the most disgraceful and scandalous grab for profits in the history of our country."

The union said it would welcome Ford's proposal that a "major company and a major union work together constructively in the public interest."

"Ford workers will be happy even now to withdraw their demands for increases in hourly wage rates at the Ford Motor Co. if that company will successfully exert its influence on the rest of American industrial management and upon the Congress to effect a substantial rollback in the cost of living," Bannon said.

Wage Parley With Packers To Reopen

Union Committee On Strike Strategy Orders Action After Study of Situation

Chicago, May 16 (AP).—The national strike strategy committee of the CIO Packinghouse Workers today directed union officials to renew negotiations with the major packing companies "im. ediately."

The committee issued a statement to that effect after an all-day review of the strike situation. A spokesman for the union said Frank E. Walsh, a Federal conciliator, will bring the union and company representatives together again "as soon as possible."

Cattle Enter St. Paul As Guard Patrols Area

South St. Paul, Minn., May 16 (AP).—Cattle entered the strike-bound South St. Paul stockyards today for the first time in nine days as rifle-carrying National Guardsmen and CIO pickets watched.

The truckload of animals—the first received at the yards since the CIO Packinghouse Workers Union intensified picketing May 8, rolled down virtually deserted streets.

Only a token picket line observed the truck's entry. The State Guardsmen carrying rifles were posted on street corners near the pickets.

The stockyards area was the scene of disorder Saturday and the guardsmen were forced to rout a mob to clear passage for workers.

Strike Began March 16

Some 500 persons later Saturday massed at the State Capitol in St. Paul to protest the troop action. Gov. Luther Youngdahl told those assembled, "You can't win a strike by anarchy."

The union originally asked for a 29-cent hourly wage increase when it struck March 16 against the Nation's major packers. The companies offered 9 cents—which was accepted by AFL Meat Handlers—but the CIO union turned down the proposal.

The CIO workers involved in the strike are covered by many classifications and wage rates. The union contends present scales range from $1.10 to $1.02 or less hourly.

Because CIO stockhandlers, affiliated with the Packinghouse Union, have refused to cross picket lines, other workers were expected to handle the arriving cattle.

Proclamation Prohibits Crowds

Spectators, pickets and sympathizers, who were out in force Saturday, were absent today. A National Guard proclamation ordered the immediate area cleared of groups of four persons or more after Saturday's disorders.

Late Saturday, the St. Paul Union Stockyards Co. informed commission firms that unrestricted shipments of cattle and calves would be received Monday, with hogs limited to 4000. A major movement of cattle was expected to be under way here by midnight.

Milton Siegel, field representative for the UPWA, had asked farmers to withhold livestock or to ship it to points not affected by the strike. He said a flood of livestock would result in drastic price drops.

National Guard officials meanwhile held a detachment of troops

U.S. Newsman's Bullet-Pierced Body Found

Sought to Interview Rebel Chief; Threats Made by Telephone

Salonika, Greece, May 16 (AP).—The bullet-pierced, trussed-up body of George Polk, American radio correspondent who had tried to arrange a secret meeting with the leaders of the Greek guerillas, was found floating today in Salonika Bay.

Polk, 34, disappeared a week ago. He had told friends he hoped to take an underground route to interview Markos Vifiades, rebel chieftain, for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Police said Polk was shot through the back of the head and dumped into Salonika Bay with his hands and legs bound with twine. He was the first American correspondent killed in the Greek civil war.

Got Threats by Phone

A close friend said Polk had received several threatening telephone calls.

Constantine Argyris, correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, said Polk had told him more than two weeks ago the callers accused him of being a Communist.

Argyris said Polk told him the callers said: "Be on guard. We are going to kill you."

A high Greek police official said Polk's slayers were Communists. However, the threatening calls indicated that anti-Communists might have desired his death.

Greek police said the tall, blond Polk might have contacted the Communist underground in Salonika and gone aboard a ship for a trip across the bay to the mountains of central Greece.

This overwater trip is believed to be the start of the underground route to the Grammos Mountains.

Several such trips were made last year by American and British newspapermen who were escorted by rebels eager to give their side

Haganah Claims Victory in First Ground Battle With Egyptians

By Eliav Simon

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 16 (U.P.).—Arab warplanes bombed this capital of the new state of Israel four times today and Jews threatened reprisal bombings of Cairo, the capital of the Arab world.

Haganah, the Jewish army, asserted that it had defeated the Egyptians in the south in the first battle between Egyptian and Jewish ground forces since the proclamation of the Jewish state.

Five Jews were killed in the third of today's raids on the waterfront area of the capital by groups of Arab fighter-bomber planes. Two of the raiding craft were shot down.

U. N. Council Advised

Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok denied persistent reports that the Israelite government had sent a direct warning of reprisals to the Egyptian government but announced that the United Nations Security Council had been advised of the attacks.

Shertok said that Haganah had now formally become the Jewish state army.

The Haganah report on the first Egyptian-Jewish clash said that the Egyptians were "routed" in an attack on the Jewish settlement of Norim, near the Egyptian border.

More than 30 Egyptians were killed, Haganah said, and a large number of Bren guns captured.

For Safety of Convoys

"This is necessary to insure the safety of our supply convoys," Shertok said.

Shertok said that Israel was sending announcements of the formation of a Jewish state to all 58 members of the United Nations and some other countries.

Diplomatic delegates will be sent to some world capitals within the next few days, he said, with Eliahu Epstein, Jewish Agency leader, representing Israel in Washington. The envoys will not be called ambassadors, he said.

Shertok said that Jewish troops

55 Senators Held For Admission Of 200,000 DPs

By the United Press

An informal poll shows that a majority of the Senate will vote for legislation to admit 200,000 displaced persons into the United States during the next two years, supporters of the legislation said yesterday.

The chamber is expected to take up the question of displaced persons—European refugees from Nazi or Soviet persecution—this week after it finishes work on a flood control bill.

Before it is a Judiciary Committee bill to admit 100,000 DPs during the next two years. Numerous Senators have introduced amendments to raise the figure to 200,000 and to remove restrictions imposed by the committee.

A source close to this group said the poll shows at least 55 Senators ready to vote for the 200,000 limit and less restrictive legislation. He said it is almost certain the Senate will approve a bill and send it to the House by the end of this week or certainly by next week.

Dr. Weizmann Heads Israel's State Council

Post Tantamount to Provisional President Of Jewish Nation

(From Press Dispatches)

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 16.—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, 73, senior statesman of Israel, was elected tonight president of the council of government—a post tantamount to provisional president of the new Jewish state.

The election took place at the first meeting of the 37-member state council.

Weizmann Ill in New York

Dr. Weizmann was in New York City tonight, ill and in the care of a physician.

The world-famous Zionist leader for years was president of the World Zionist organization and of the Jewish Agency for Palestine. Born in Czarist Russia, he made his home for many years in Britain. Later he went to Palestine where he directed the experimental laboratory at Rehoboth.

The new Jewish state which he heads is the direct result of his own efforts more than 30 years ago.

At that time he was professor of chemistry at the University of Manchester, England. It was the darkest period of World War I, 1916. Prime Minister David Lloyd George summoned him to London.

Synthetic Developed

There was a dangerous shortage of acetone, indispensable to the manufacture of high explosives, Weizmann was told. He was asked to use his great chemical knowledge to help, and was placed in charge of the Admiralty Laboratories.

Working night and day, he took a month to invent a synthetic acetone which could be made from cereals and horse chestnuts. A sufficient supply of explosives was assured Britain.

Lloyd George, in his memoirs, said that Weizmann's work "not only helped us to win the war but made a permanent mark upon the map of the world."

Lloyd George called for Weizmann and offered to recommend him for the highest honors, for a title and for a monetary grant. Weizmann refused. Pressed, he finally asked for something:

"There is only one thing I want

Legion Occupies 20-Mile Stretch; Tribesmen Pour In From Trans-Jordan

By Sam Souki

Arab Legion Headquarters in Palestine, May 16 (U.P.).—King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan Arab Legion has occupied a 20-mile stretch of territory north of Jerusalem and its forward units dug in today within sight of the Holy City.

The legionnaires have contacted Arab volunteers operating in the Jenin sector to the north and in the Jerusalem suburbs to the south.

Commands Being Unified

Fawzi el Kawkji, Arab volunteer leader who has been operating his forces in Palestine for weeks, is unifying his command with that of the Legion.

The Legion's operation so far has been entirely within Arab territory as defined by the partition proposal of the United Nations.

But it is reported here that Kawkji's men are continuing independent operations within the Jewish state of Israel, and that his artillery bombarded Jewish positions in Jerusalem last night.

The territory occupied by the Legion extends from Nablus to Ramallah, 10 miles north of Jerusalem.

Only One Clash Thus Far

There has been only one clash with Jews, when the Legion forward units reached a point within 2000 yards of a Jewish settlement. At other points, Jews merely snipe at Arabs who come within range.

A staff officer here pointed out that though the Legion advance was in Arab territory, King Abdullah does not recognize the partition of Palestine.

This is described as the first stage of operations. It is indicated that the next moves will depend both on international political de-

4 Congressmen Urge Embargo End for Israel

Four Congressmen joined voices last night with about 2000 Washington Jews in urging that the arms embargo be lifted for the new state of Israel, but kept in force for "aggressive" Middle Eastern countries.

Representative John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, minority whip, told an overflowing crowd at the Shoreham Hotel that America's next logical steps following President Truman's de facto recognition of the new state are:

1. An exchange of diplomatic representatives, and

2. Lifting of the arms embargo "so far as the new nation is concerned."

"It is pleasing and reassuring to know," he declared, "that President Truman at this moment is considering the taking of these two steps by our Government."

The meeting, sponsored by the Washington Zionist Emergency Council, adopted a resolution urging an end to the embargo and asking the United States to condemn aggression against Israel as "a threat to peace."

The resolution also asked that economic aid be sent to the embryo nation to "implement the President's offer to help finance large-scale immigration of Jewish displaced persons in Europe to Israel."

President Truman was praised at the rally for his "prompt and courageous action" in extending recognition to Israel within minutes of its birth last Friday night. Proclamation of the new state in borders defined by the United Nations partition resolution of last November 29 followed immediately the end of Britain's mandate in the Holy Land.

Sergeant to Stay in USSR

'Seduction by Soviet Agent' Charged in Army Desertion

By the United Press

The State Department announced last night that a 21-year-old sergeant had deserted the U. S. Army in Moscow and served notice that he is remaining in the Soviet Union.

State Department officials said it was a case of seduction and exploitation by an experienced female Soviet agent of a young inexperienced American in a strategic spot. The State Department's formal announcement said:

"The American embassy in Moscow has reported that Sergt. James M. McMillin, U. S. Army, sent word to the embassy on May 15 of his refusal to return to the United States on that date under orders to complete his term of service, and of his intention to remain in the Soviet Union.

"Sergeant McMillan has been on duty in the military attache's office in the embassy of Moscow for the past two years. He has been absent without leave since May 15."

McMillin's home is Boulder, Colo.

State Department officials said they did not know whether he had taken any documents from the military attache's office or whether he had access to any important papers during his infatuation and relations with the Soviet woman agent.

Officials confirmed that his action constituted desertion and that if he ever returns within jurisdiction of the U. S. Army he will, of course, have to face a military court.

The State Department took the unusual action of calling a special Sunday night press conference to make the announcement. It recalled that the sergeant's desertion was similar to the case of Miss Annabel Bucar, a Pennsylvania employe of the embassy, who resigned in February, giving as an excuse the fact that she wished to marry a Soviet citizen.

The case of McMillin, however, had all the elements of a superduper spy thriller with a mysterious female who once before had infatuated another American Army sergeant and married him.

Sex was discussed at the staid State Department as officials explained that McMillin unquestionably had been seduced by the mysterious Soviet spy.

Officials gave the following account and evaluation of the incident:

Its significance is that it is obviously seduction and exploitation by an experienced Soviet agent of a young inexperienced American in a strategic spot.

According to the best information available, McMillin obviously

Reds Disguised as Sheep Die Trying to Take Chinese City

Peiping, (Monday) May 17 (AP).—Chinese Communists disguised themselves as sheep in a bold but futile attempt to breach the walls of beseiged Yinghsien, in Shansi Province.

This Chinese version of the ancient Trojan horse technique was reported today by headquarters of Gen. Fu Tso-yi. Several score Communists draped in sheepskins mingled with a herd of more than 1000 sheep.

The herd was driven toward the southeast walls of the city. There Communists attempted to breach the wall with explosives. Another force of Reds attacked the southwestern walls simultaneously. But the defenders drove off both bands, headquarters reported.

Casualties among the attackers were listed as more than 250 men—and 70 sheep.

Yinghsien has withstood 31 days of siege. Fu said the defenders are outnumbered about 20 to 1.

Earlier, Communist columns were reported disrupting traffic on the Peiping-Mukden rail line in southwestern Manchuria.

Progovernment reports acknowledged the Comunists blew up two bridges in the 40-mile stretch between Shanhaikwan and Suichung and temporarily seized two stations.

Both Shanhaikwan and Suichung were under Communist siege, but government reinforcements were reported moving up.

Farther west in Jehol Province, fighting was reported on the outskirts of Chengteh, provincial capital.

Peter of Yugoslavia Arrives in City, King Without Country, Without Fanfare

A king arrived in Washington last night, but so far as returning weekenders at Union Station were concerned, he was just another well-dressed, brief case-carrying young man homeward bound.

The reason for the fanfareless arrival was that the man was King Peter of Yugoslavia, a king without a country.

Met only by Raymond D. Muir, assistant chief of the State Department Protocol Division, and former Yugoslavian Ambassador and Mrs. Alexander C. Fotitch, the 25-year-old king escorted his slightly taller wife, Queen Alexandra, through the station. Hundreds poured out of train coaches, but were oblivious to his royal highness.

Plans for Visit Here

What does such a king do in Washington? Well, first thing was to check in at the Shoreham Hotel, which housed another kingdomless monarch a short while ago—King Michael of Romania, Peter's cousin.

Then, he will visit friends made on another visit here, drop in at the State Department, and hold a press conference at his suite.

Anything brewing in Yugoslavia? "No, this is just a social visit, to see my friends and see people in Washington," the shy, pale youth smilingly replied.

Does he expect anything to happen shortly in Yugoslavia?

"No, no, there is nothing imminent," he declared firmly, arching an eyebrow, as if to emphasize. "There is no possibility for the near future."

Moving out of the limelight agrees with the monarch. Although he is descended from Kara (Black) George, a Serbian Robin Hood who drove out the Turks in 1810, he has been known as a frail, sensitive, shy and modest young man.

Anonymity Denied

But life has not permitted him to bask in anonymity. Born the son of King Alexander, he was destined to rule some day over the 13 million Serbs, Croats, Bosnians, Montenegrins, Slovenes, Macedonians and Slavs who make up Yugoslavia.

At the age of 11 before he could comprehend the significance of this position he became King upon the assassination of his father. That is, he was King with the advice and guidance of three regents appointed to help rule until he was 18.

In 1940 he again ascended to the throne, under circumstances more dramatic than the most carefully planned coronation. The event took place on the night of March 25 when the army and the Yugoslav people overthrew the regency of Prince Paul who had bound the nation to the Axis.

As tanks patrolled the streets and machine-gunners lined the roads, Peter fled to Greece. The Nazis attacked quickly and in less than two months, Peter fled to England, where he became a student at Cambridge University, boning up on international law and economics.

Yesterday, as the square-shouldered youth, quietly dressed in a gray sharkskin suit, entered his car, he looked like another George Washington or Georgetown University student returning to school.

of the fighting. But recently there has been a hardening of attitude toward Americans. The guerillas have described Americans as "Fascist beasts" in radio broadcasts from Markos headquarters.

Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said today he had ordered a complete investigation.

"I am going to mobilize the entire police of Greece to uncover the details of his death," the Premier said.

U. S. Consul General Raleigh Gibson, of Decatur, Ill., said Polk's hands and feet were tied loosely. Robbery apparently was not the motive, since a wrist watch and a wallet containing 300,000 drachme (about $30) were found on the body.

In Water Seven Days

The coroner estimated the body had been in the water about seven days. It was identified by an acquaintance of Polk's, Waide M. Condon of Salt Lake City, United States Information Service representative.

He was last seen last Sunday. A search began Wednesday when Polk's War Department correspondent's identification card and a calendar belonging to him were received by mail at Salonika police headquarters. These were in an envelope addressed in Greek with no accompanying letter.

Had Premonition

His pretty, black-haired bride of eight months, Mrs. Rhea Polk, said her husband had "a feeling that he was going to die" when he left Athens more than a week ago.

Mrs. Polk described him as a fatalist who often said his time was coming to an end. "He felt," she added, "he had had every experience in life and there was no new goal to look forward to."

Mrs. Polk said he would be buried in Athens in accordance with his will.

"It was incredible to think George had left on a trip to the mountains without taking his camera, typewriter, shaving kit, overcoat, stationery or pencils," Mrs. Polk said.

She added she had found last Friday an unmailed letter to CBS in which Polk reported he was attempting to "establish contact" with the guerillas.

Nominated For Fellowship

Polk had been nominated for a Nieman journalism fellowship at Harvard University. He had planned to return to the United States next week.

Dwight Griswold, administrator of American aid to Greece, said tonight he was saddened to hear of Polk's death.

"He was a journalist who represented the best in his profession," Griswold said. "His death in these tragic circumstances is a loss to all of us who seek international understanding and believe a free, responsible press can help us reach that goal. I considered him a personal friend and admired his work."

Survivors, in addition to his wife, include his mother, Mrs. Adelaide Polk, Beverly Hills, Calif.; two sisters, Mrs. William Fuller, Fort Worth, Tex., and Mrs. James Lorenz, St. Louis, Mo., and a brother, William Polk, Harvard University.

Polk Was Outstanding As Journalist, Flier

Foreign correspondent, editor and Navy combat flyer during World War II, George Washington Polk crammed several lifetimes into a little more than ten years. His career, took him to Alaska and Guadalcanal, to Washington, Paris and Greece.

Born in Fort Worth, Tex., October 17, 1913, Mr. Polk attended Virginia Military Institute but left school after three years to go into newspaper work. In 1937, he went to Alaska as city editor of the Fairbanks Daily News Miner. At the same time he completed his education at the University of Alaska.

On Shanghai Paper

The next jump was to China where he went to work for the Shanghai Evening Post. Two years later he was in Paris as a member of the New York Herald Tribune Bureau there. In 1940 he came to New York to join the Herald Tribune foreign desk.

In 1941, Mr. Polk was commissioned as a lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserve and qualified as a Navy pilot. Assigned to the Southwest Pacific, he flew both fighter planes and dive bombers. He was one of a group of aviators attached to the First Marine Division during the Guadalcanal-Tulagi campaign and the first Navy flier to land on Guadalcanal.

Attacked by Japanese

Late in 1942 he was sent to search for a fighter pilot forced down at sea north of Guadalcanal. He was attacked by Japanese planes and landed finally on a small island in the Solomons, occupied by Japanese. Natives spirited him from village to village. After seven days he was picked up by an American pilot and returned to Guadalcanal.

Wounded twice and suffering from malaria, he was hospitalized at the Navy Medical Center, Bethesda, Md. In 1943 Mr. Polk joined the Washington Bureau of the Herald Tribune and covered the White House and the State Department for about a year. He later opened the Washington bureau of the Los Angeles News here. In September, 1945, he went to Europe again and became correspondent for Columbia Broadcasting in November of that year.

He was married in Athens to Miss Rhea Coconis of Alexandria, Egypt, last September. A previous marriage, to Miss Mary Catherine Phillips of Washington, ended in divorce.

Catholic School Takeover Due In Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, May 16 (AP).—Education Minister Gyula Ortutay today said Catholic schools will be nationalized along with other educational institutions in Hungary despite a threat of excommunication by Josef Cardinal Mindszenty. Ortutay is himself a Catholic.

The cardinal said in a pastoral letter read in the churches that any Catholic who supports the plan for the government to take over the schools will be barred from communion.

The Minister said he would begin negotiating with the church next week. He added that the Government would not tolerate any "terrorism" by the cardinal against Cathalics who are ready to cooperate with the plan. Ortutay said the government was willing for the religious character of the church schools to continue.

The nationalization plan was put forward by the New Workers Party, which is composed of the merged Communist and Social Democratic Parties.

Germans Vote Dislike For Russian Life

Berlin, May 16 (U.P.).—A cross-section public opinion poll showed today that Germans in the American zone and the western allied sectors of Berlin don't think much of the Russian way of life.

Three thousand Germans in 225 population centers of the American zone, and another 500 in the British, French and American sectors of Berlin answered questions about Russia in the poll conducted by the U. S. Information and Control Division.

The majority of them believe the Russian people have little or nothing to say about their government's policies and that only favored groups—not the workers—live well in the Soviet Union.

Gromyko Speech Today Has U. N. Expectant

Lake Success, N. Y., May 16 (U.P.).—United Nations diplomats, wondering whether Russia might carry her "peace offensive" into the U.N. waited expectantly tonight for a speech by Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko in tomorrow's meeting of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister was slated to make an important speech on the east-west deadlock over the problem of international atomic energy control.

Gromyko's speech was likely to represent an attempt by Moscow to head off a final vote on the decision of the American-led majority to break off indefinitely all negotiations on the atomic issue.

acted not as a result of any political ideas—regardless of what may be said by the other side on this subject—but as a result of youthful inexperience, infatuation and attachment to a Soviet married woman with whom he has secretly carried on relations for some time.

His decision apparently was precipitated by the fact that his two-year period of service in the Soviet Union had expired and arrangements had been made for him to leave for the United States on May 15.

Helped Him Pack

Investigation discloses that the woman was with him in his rooms until after midnight on the night of May 14, helping him pack his personal effects. They left together.

The woman in the case, Mrs. Galina Dunaeva Biconish, was married to an American Army sergeant, John Biconish, also formerly on the staff of the United States Embassy in Moscow. Biconish is understood to be in this country now.

Reasons for Mrs. Biconish's continued and persistent efforts to associate with American enlisted personnel, despite steps taken meanwhile by the Soviet government to cut off all contact between Soviet citizens and foreigners in the Soviet Union, seem abundantly clear.

The technique in the McMillin case recalls that of Miss Bucar, an embassy employe in Moscow who resigned suddenly under questionable circumstances at the end of February after having allegedly married a Soviet citizen.

The State Department said the embassy has been unable to discover the whereabouts of Sergt. McMillin since his disappearance on May 14.

McMillin is 21 years old. He joined the service on August 28, 1945, as a member of the military mission in Moscow and on November 1, 1946, enlisted in the United States Army for three years.

Izvestia Lauds Wallace Idea To Heal Rift

Moscow, May 16 (U.P.).—The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia agreed today with Henry A. Wallace, American third party presidential candidate, that differences between the United States and Russia could be settled by negotiation.

The newspaper said there were no differences between the two nations that could not be settled through peaceful discussion.

At the same time, Izvestia said the guilt of powers violating international agreements, interfering with internal affairs of other states, and threatening other nations, must be established before such negotiations could be successful. The Soviet Union, it said, is not guilty of any of these acts.

Izvestia said Wallace's letter to Premier Josef Stalin, delivered just after the diplomatic exchange between United States Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith and Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, was "very positive and comforting."

The newspaper said that the Soviet public and "evidently an overwhelming part of the United States public" agreed with Wallace concerning peaceful negotiations between the two nations.

Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, published a similar article on the Wallace letter. It said the Wallace message was "incomparably more favorable" than the Smith note. Izvestia said the Wallace letter was concrete and consistent.

Izvestia differed with Wallace in some particulars, but agreed with his proposals generally.

The newspaper said, however, that Wallace's apparent policy of trying not to offend any of the great powers did not help a realistic regulation of differences.

Of Wallac's statement that "millions of Americans" believe that Soviet leaders are planning world conquest, Izvestia said Wallace mistook "reactionary newspaper propaganda" for American public opinion. He ered also, Izvestia said, when he said millions of Russians believe the United States plans to invade the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet public has never considered and does not consider that the American people bear responsibility for the actions and criminal plans of a limited group of people who get profits from the development of a military psychosis," the newspaper said.

U. S.-Soviet Note Exchange Viewed in Paris As Hint of Effort Toward Cold War 'Truce'

By Walter Kerr

Paris, May 16 (NYHT.).—The recent diplomatic exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union is now believed in Paris to have been far more vital than was realized in the first confusing days after its disclosure by Moscow radio.

It is perfectly true that American officials in Paris tell a different story of what it was all about than has been told in Washington. It is equally true that for this reason the French Foreign Ministry is not yet certain that it knows exactly what took place and why. But investigation discloses that the entire episode is too full of meaning to be discarded as a fumbling diplomatic effort that was turned into a propaganda coup by Communist officials.

Washington described the first oral statement of Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith as just a "reiteration of the American position as it has been repeatedly expressed both publicly and privately." American officials in Paris say that it was a diplomatic warning to the Soviet government that expansion beyond its present sphere of influence could be undertaken only at grave risk.

Iran In Mind, They Say

Specificially, they say, the case of Iran was in the minds of the State Department and White House when instructions were sent to Ambassador Smith in Moscow. Reference to the "door" always being open to discussion, it is said, was included solely to convey this message without aggravating Russian fears of American intentions and deepening the existing crisis.

The explanation may appear obscure, but so is the language of diplomacy.

Soviet quarters here were noncommital as usual. Eastern European diplomats who know the Russians well, however, spoke freely.

In their opinion, the Soviet foreign office understood quite well that this was the meaning behind the American move, and they believe the Soviet reply was the Russian way of saying that it agreed expansion had gone far enough, provided a satisfactory understanding could be reached.

This, too, appears obscure, but no more obscure, the eastern Europeans say, than the original American step. Both governments, they claim, were trying to convey a meaning that they felt they could not safely put into words. These sources expect further developments, though perhaps not for the time being.

Phases Not Explained

None of this explains why the United States did not notify its ambassadors in London and Paris and the British and French of the purpose behind the first American move. Nor does it explain why the Kremlin broke with diplomatic custom by premature publication of confidential information. It does suggest, however, that Moscow was seeking something more than a propaganda coup; perhaps that it is in urgent need of a rest from the long "cold war."

This argument is supported by the knowledge that the Russians always have sought bilateral discussions with the United States and that the United States has refused consistently on the ground that it could not bargain away the vital interests of its western allies.

It also may be supported by the possibility that, having been told by Ambassador Smith that bilateral talks were out of the question, they still felt compelled to seek them by attempting to enlist on their side the weight of world public opinion. In any case, the eastern European diplomats in Paris are reporting in great earnestness that the Kremlin is looking for a way out of the present East-West stalemate.

Army to Recruit Information Corps

By the United Press

The Army yesterday announced plans for recruiting a corps of public information specialists.

It said that about 100 "highly qualified men" will be offered a chance to enlist this summer for training in "all phases of journalistic, radio and public information work." The plan is to make public information a regular Army career.

Enlistees must sign up for three years, the Army said. They will receive three months of on-the-job training in regular offices of newspapers, radio and television stations. After training, the men will be assigned to Army public information jobs throughout the world.

Points of Conflict In War for Israel

Plane symbols show where enemy planes bombed Tel Aviv yesterday, and route of an armored British column reported fired upon by Egyptian Air Force while en route from Hebron to Rafah. Haganah said besieged Arab city of Acre (A) "is expected to surrender at any moment," and that at least 200 Arabs were killed or wounded at Malikya (B). Pointers from (C) locate Tiberias, where Iraq forces were reported attacking, and Samakh, where Syrians said they had occupied a camp.

Lake Success, May 16 (NYHT). The two-day-old state of Israel applied for membership in the United Nations in a telegram signed by Moshe Shertok, foreign secretary of the provisional government of Israel.

Earlier in the day Israel filed its first complaint to the United Nations demanding that the Security Council take immediate action against Egypt for "open aggression" in Palestine.

In addition, U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie received two communications from Arab sources today, one from King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan stating that his forces had been "compelled to enter Palestine to protect unarmed Arabs against massacres similar to those of Deir Yasin."

The second, from Abdul Rahaman Azzam Pasha, secretary general of the League of Arab States, outlined the reasons for Arab intervention.

There appeared little prospect of Security Council action on the matter tomorrow. Most countries were waiting for clarification of the situation.

The big question was: Will the Arabs really invade central Jewish areas or stop at Arab boundaries under the partition program?

A member of the British delegation noted that the issue of the boundary is a factor in British consideration of recognition of the new Jewish nation. Other delegations had uppermost in mind whether the United States will lift the embargo on arms shipments to the Middle East.

Before the Council meets tomorrow, the Big Five will hold a private session to pick a U. N. mediator for Palestine in accordance with Friday's resolution of the General Assembly.

Taft Asks U. N. to Send Troops to Palestine

New York, May 16 (U.P.).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), tonight urged that the United Nations provide armed forces to keep peace in Palestine at a mass demonstration in Madison Square Garden saluting the new Jewish state.

However, he said, "If all else fails, we have economic pressure of our own. The U. S. has always sympathized and supported people fighting for their freedom."

—a national home for my people."

Balfour Declaration Followed

A few months later the Balfour Declaration was made. It said:

"His Majesty's Government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of that object."

Since that time Weizmann has fought unceasingly for the Zionist state.

During World War II he was honorary chemical adviser to the British Ministry of Supply, doing his work in the United States. He lost one of his two sons, a flight lieutenant in the Royal Air Force.

Since the war he has spent much time in this country working for his cause. His latest public appearances were before the United Nations during the debates on partition of Palestine.

Dr. Weizmann was born near Pinsk, Russia, on November 27, 1874. He was the third child of a family of 15, 11 of whom lived. His father was a timber merchant. His mother worked to send nine of her children to the university. Weizmann attended the University of Freiburg and got his D. Sc. at the University of Berlin.

Later he married Vera Chatzman, a doctor, and in 1903 went to England on a lectureship at the University of Manchester.

He is quiet but stubborn. In appearance he resembles Lenin, with balding head, mustache and square goatee, although he is big and broadshouldered. He is reported to be working on secret research in connection with acetone.

When the map of the partitioned Palestine was being drawn, Rehoboth was included in the Arab state.

"Put it in the Jewish state at once," the British representative declared. "Palestine without Weizmann is impossible."

Hyderabad Raids Bring Warning

New Delhi, India, May 16 (U.P.).—The Nizam (prince) of independent Hyderabad, an "island state" in the Dominion of India, has been notified that the Indian government will "take action to force his hand" unless he halts border raiding by May 24, an authoritative source said today.

hold practically all strategic points in Jerusalem.

Arabs in Jerusalem were reported to have opened a heavy ground attack in the Jewish quarter of the old walled city and the western suburbs were under artillery fire.

Other Arab ground forces were reported attacking Neve Yaacob, 5 miles north of Jerusalem, and a string of villages in the area south of the Sea of Galilee where Arab regulars previously captured the Nahairyam electric power station.

It was reported that several children were wounded in an attack by Arab planes on the Jewish settlements of Afikim and Ashdot Yaacov near the Jordan River.

Haganah, the Israelite army, reported that its men had captured Latroun on the main highway midway between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem, and the village of Dier Aiyur, 2½ miles southeast. Arab forces were reported still holding out in a Trappist monastery at Latroun, but Haganah had the main base of a big Arab volunteer force under Fawzi el Kawkji.

Three planes have now been shot down over Tel Aviv in two days. Haganah reported that the pilots were members of the Egyptian air force.

Crowds in the streets at the time of the air raids expressed disappointment that no Jewish planes had gone up to meet the attackers.

Strict blackouts were ordered at night from now on.

With the capture of Latroun, Haganah sent through a convoy of armored cars to Jerusalem, which has been in a virtual state of siege for three weeks, without food convoys from the coast.

Advices from the Sea of Galilee front reported that a big column of smoke could be seen in the vicinity of the Hanarayim power station, and that the four-million-dollar installation seemed to be afire.

A United Press dispatch from Acre, up the coast from Tel Aviv, reported that fighting continued there where Jewish forces were attacking.

Britons Machinegunned, Haganah Reports Say

Tel Aviv, May 16 (AP).—Haganah, the Jewish army, today reported that British troops had been machinegunned by the Egyptian Air Force in southern Palestine.

Haganah said an armored British column en route from Hebron to Rafah on the Egyptian border "was attacked yesterday at 10:30 a. m. by machinegun fire from Egyptian planes."

An hour before, a temporary RAF airdrome in this area was bombed and eight soldiers were wounded, the bulletin added.

blood (R., Mich.) declared the United States must now "create a Palestine policy which must be a realistic one, based on the one hand upon the realities of the moment, and on the other, dedicated to justice and democracy."

Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.) declared: "Nurtured in the finest traditions of our own American democracy, the Jews of Palestine have created the only true democratic state in the Middle East."

Representative Robert J. Twyman (R., Ill.) said he hoped that American aid to Israel "will be another step toward world peace."

Eliahu Epstein, director of the Jewish Agency's Washington office, who was named yesterday first diplomatic representative of Israel in America, also spoke at the meeting. He expressed the hope that "in this bright day, and through friendly relations and cooperation with this great democracy, we can make notable contributions to lasting peace, prosperity and progress in the world."

Earlier yesterday, in a WQQW broadcast, Epstein revealed that a merger between Haganah, Israel's official army, and Irgun, the extreme underground militia, is in the making.

He said that in "a working agreement" between the two "there is expressly stated that when a Jewish state is established and a regular Jewish army organized, both Haganah and the Irgun will lose their individual identities and will be consolidated into the regular army on a voluntary basis."

Tel Aviv Depots Fired By Egyptian Planes

Cairo, Egypt, May 16 (U.P.).—An army communique said tonight that Egyptian warplanes set fire to depots in the port area of Tel Aviv, destroyed the Petah Tikva airport east of it and attacked Jewish settlements in the far south.

Confirming unofficial reports, the communique said the main Egyptian ground forces occupied Gaza, 20 miles inside Palestine on the seacoast, Saturday night.

Four transit depots in the port area were set afire by bomber planes in the Tel Aviv air raids, the communique said, and Petah Tikva airport, eight miles east of the Jewish capital, was destroyed "completely."

Heavy damage was done by Egyptian warplanes which bombed Jewish settlements between Gaza and Beersheba, 30 miles inland, the communique said.

Bomber planes also hit two Jewish planes on the ground at Acre airport, up the coast from Tel Aviv, the communique said.

The Egyptian government announced officially the seizure of the Belgian ship Hinten, alleged to be carrying arms and ammunition for Palestine Jews.

The Egyptian cabinet tonight authorized the defense ministry to call up army reserves, both officers and men, who had been disbanded in the last five years, "owing to the present circumstances."

The defense ministry also was empowered to call up government civil service employes and territorial (national guard) officers who have been training university students for military service.

The government revealed that it had seized four American Transworld Airways C-47 transport planes which were at Farouk field here awaiting delivery to Saudi Arabia. It was said authoritatively that strong representations had been made both to Egypt and Saudi Arabia by American authorities here.

Trans-Jordan's Arab forces occupied a big stretch of eastern Palestine while Egyptian troops speared into Palestine from the south.

Unofficial reports said Egyptians entered biblical Beersheba after spearing 30 miles through territory of the new Jewish state in the far south.

An unconfirmed report from Lebanon, said that Egyptians operating on the seacoast linked with Arabs in the Ramle sector only 12½ miles southeast of Tel Aviv.

Egyptian regulars who took Gaza were reported making that big Arab town a base for a further advance up the seacoast in the direction of Tel Aviv.

Lebanon reported also that Arabs were winning in a new fight for Jerusalem and there was even talk of Jews asking for terms. This report was completely unconfirmed.

Other dispatches reported that Arabs captured Lydda Airport between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem and the important Samakh railroad junction on the Sea of Galilee.

In northwestern Palestine, dispatches said, Lebanese troops are shelling Habouta, Jewish settlement 5 miles from the frontier on the seacoast.

Lebanese and Syrian troops inland were reported advancing through the Huleh Valley.

Troops of the crack Arab Legion occupied a 20-mile stretch of territory north of Jerusalem.

Beersheba was assigned to the Jews in the United Nations partition plan, but under a revision it was earmarked for the Arabs.

In most operations, the Arabs were confining themselves to territory which the U.N. proposed to allot them, but just south of the Sea of Galilee, the Arabs were operating in Jewish-assigned territory.

The Arabs were now consolidating a line extending 40 miles from Jenin to the suburbs of Jerusalem, and the Arab legion today linked with the irregular forces of Fawzi el Kawkji.

Official sources refused to go beyond communiques on the movements of the Egyptian troops in the south.

But Commerce Minister Mamdouh Riaz Bey said the advance into Palestine had exceeded all expectations. Arabs in the area feel so secure, he said, that they are starting to harvest their corn.

A Beirut, Lebanon, dispatch said that Arab volunteers operating in the Jerusalem suburbs occupied Atarot, six miles north of the city, and captured 268 Jewish men. Eighty-six women and children who were taken were handed over to the International Red Cross, he dispatch said.

[An official Arab military source in Amman, capital of Trans-Jordan, said the Egyptian army had occupied the town of Madjal, 14 miles north of Gaza. This source also said Syrian forces had occupied Samakh, south of Galilee, the Associated Press reported.]

Haj Amin el Husseini, Mufti of Jerusalem and No. 1 enemy of the Jews, arrived here tonight unexpectedly with other members of the Arab Higher Committee.

Reflecting Arab bitterness over United States recognition of Israel, Sheikh Hassan el Banna, supreme guide of the Moslem Brotherhood, cabled President Truman:

"Your recognition of the Zionist state is equivalent to a declaration of war against the Arabs of the Moslem world.

"Your pursuance of this crooked and deceptive policy is a violation of the United Nations Charter, of the rights of men and of self-determination.

"We therefore lay the responsibility squarely before the world and before history on the American people."

Like Housing Asked For Officers, Men

By Sen. Johnson

Army Hit For Rejecting Older Men

By the United Press

Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) yesterday disputed a fresh Army claim that it had done everything possible to get the added men it needs by voluntary methods but without success.

Johnson said the Army is flatly rejecting men over 35 with no good reason. Actually, he added, older men should be welcomed for occupation duty.

He said he may introduce an amendment to raise the age limits in the Senate Armed Services Committee's draft bill to 21 through 30 years. It now calls for a year's training for 18-year-olds and a two-year draft of eligible men aged 19 through 25.

The threat of a new dispute over the need for a draft came as the House Rules Committee prepared to send the House draft bill to the floor. But, it will not come to a vote until next week, about the time the Senate draft bill is due for floor debate.

Meantime, 83 college presidents went on record against both training and draft legislation.

The House bill provides for a 19-through-25-year draft but has no provision for training 18-year-olds. House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., told reporters that the 18-year-old training plan will not be approved by the House, though he predicted the draft will be.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, conceded that there is a "strong desire" to knock it out in the Senate. He said "the bill may be amended in this particular" on the Senate floor.

That would leave a straight 19-through-25 draft in both House and Senate bills. However, Martin again said there is "strong sentiment" in the House to write a delayed-action clause into the bill and thus make President Truman responsible for actually putting the draft into effect" if he finds that voluntary recruiting won't work."

By the Associated Press

A plan to build Army officers the same kind of family quarters as enlisted men get was proposed yesterday by Representative Bates (R., Mass.).

He suggested it as a compromise to clear the way for House passage this week of a $207,930,350 Army construction bill on which debate started week before last. It has been held up by an argument over the cost of officers' homes.

The bill is said by the Army to be absolutely necessary if regular officers and enlisted men who have families are to be kept happy with their careers. It would authorize money for living quarters and other improvements at bases and posts from Newfoundland to Hawaii.

Predicts Passage Wednesday

Bates said he hopes to get the bill back on the House floor by Wednesday, and predicted it would be passed the same day.

Meanwhile the House Armed Services Committee awaited a full report from Secretary of Defense Forrestal on why the Navy wants to quit work on 13 uncompleted warships and divert the money to developing guided-missile vessels and a giant 65,000-ton aircraft carrier.

The Army construction bill, of which Bates is floor manager, would authorize $8,500,000 for secret air bases in Alaska and Newfoundland. It also would earmark five million dollars for building up the Air Force's biggest heavy bomber base at Rapid City, S. Dak.

Hit Case's Roadblock

The bill ran into a roadblock thrown up by Representative Case (R., S. Dak.), a member of the House subcommittee in charge of military appropriations. He pointed out that it would abandon the present limits of $14,500 on homes for senior officers and $12,500 for those of captain and below.

The bill would impose, instead, a limit on the floor space to be allowed for homes of officers. Case said the Armed Services Committee's figures showed that a general's home could cost up to $27,300, and those for noncommissioned officers provided with family quarters would cost $14,040.

Bates proposed that the floor-space limit for noncommissioned officers' quarters, 1080 square feet, be made applicable for all quarters. This would provide a two-story home with three bedrooms in a multiple-unit building of eight homes, Bates said.

House Awaits Senate's Lead On Lynch Bill

By the Associated Press

Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) said yesterday the House will pass anti-lynch legislation if the Senate does.

"If the Senate passes it, we will act on it," he told reporters. "We can pass it in a day. In fact, we could get a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules and pass it with 40 minutes' debate."

His statement came after Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Senate's Republican Policy Committee, said hte Senate may take up the antipoll tax bill already approved by the House before it tackles an antilynch bill.

The policy committee had announced earlier that the first Senate test on civil rights legislation would be made on an antilynch bill. Any civil rights measure is sure to touch off hot debate in the Senate and bring on threats of a filibuster by Southerners.

The antipoll tax bill, which would outlaw payment of a poll tax as a requisite for voting in Federal elections, has been approved by the Senate Rules Committee. Passed by the House, it can be called up for debate at any time.

On Eve of $350,000 Campaign

Lieut. Betty Williford fastens a poster to the side of a vehicle to herald opening of Salvation Army's drive here today to raise $350,000.

The Salvation Army today launches a drive to raise $350,000 to rebuild its facilities here.

The drive, which will continue through June 17, will mark the first direct appeal for funds to the general public made by the Salvation Army in 25 years.

The money is needed to rebuild the Salvation Army home for women and children, to renovate its residence for employed girls and to expand camp and youth centers for under-privileged children.

The campaign will be aided by hundreds of volunteer workers, including prominent business, civic and social leaders, under the direction of General Chairman Frank A. Birgfeld.

Eric A. Johnston, honorary campaign chairman and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association of America, will be guest speaker at the campaign "kickoff" luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Hamilton Hotel Divisional Commander W. W. Bouterse will also speak. Postmaster General J. M. Donaldson, chairman of the Federal Government division in the drive, and Commissioner John Russell Young, who heads the District government division, will attend.

Others aiding in the campaign who will be present include Andrew Jarker, jr., and Robert L. McKeever, business division chairman; J. E. Burroughs, T. S. Holland and W. B. Van Devanter, big gifts chairmen; Brig. Gen. Robert L. Cox and Mrs. Allan Dougherty, special gifts chairmen, and Josh Lee, publicity chairman.

Steel Union to Test Non-Red Oath Law

By the United Press

Boston, May 16 (U.P.).—The executive board of the United Steelworkers Union (CIO) agreed unanimously today to test in court the non-Communist provisions of the Taft-Hartley law.

Arthur S. Goldberg, CIO chief counsel, said the board decided to make a test case of a dispute already in progress between the union and the Inland Steel Corp. of Indiana Harbor, Ind.

The company refused to negotiate with the union on a pension proposal until local officers signed non-Communist affidavits. Under the Taft-Hartley law, both local and international union officers are required to sign statements that they are not Communists. The union contends this part of the law is unconstitutional.

The executive board's action followed authorization last week by the union's fourth constitutional convention. The convention delegates told the 41-man executive board to decide whether to seek a legal test of the controversial section.

Printers Push Demand Up At New York

New York, May 16 (AP).—New York City's 2500 newspaper printers today adopted a revised set of contract proposals, calling for a $15 wage boost instead of the previously sought $9 increase.

There was no immediate comment from the employers.

The action by members of Local 6 of the AFL International Typographical Union came more than a week after discussions with the city's publishers reached a stalemate.

Laurence H. Victory, local president, said the new contract proposals included all changes previously recommended by the ITU executive council. He said the proposals would be sent to the council in Indianapolis, Ind., for its approval, before negotiations with the Publishers' Association of New York City were resumed.

ITU President Woodruff Randolph told a National Labor Relations Board hearing Thursday that the local "violated" the union's laws in drawing up its previous tentative agreement with the publishers.

The tentative agreement would have boosted printers' weekly pay from $90 to $99 on the day shift, from $95 to $104 on the night shift, and from $100 to $109 on the late night shift.

The new proposals adopted today call for wages of $105, $110 and $115 on the respective shifts. Victory said the new proposals also gave the union jurisdiction over "varitype" equipment, which may be used as a substitute typesetting process.

Lewis Plans Fight on Some Negotiators

By the United Press

John L. Lewis has threatened to fight the seating of some soft coal industry negotiators when new contract talks begin here Tuesday, it was revealed yesterday.

The United Mine Workers' president has told some producers that the joint wage conference will determine "the admissibility of strangers who try to intrude themselves."

His statement appeared aimed directly at Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, but there may be others.

Refusal Charge Pending

Moody already has one charge of refusal to bargain pending against Lewis before the National Labor Relations Board. Robert N. Denham, board general counsel, is reported to have about completed his investigation into the charge and will decide soon whether to issue a complaint and bring Lewis to trial on charges of violating the Taft-Hartley Act.

Lewis refused to negotiate with Moody during the recent pension strike and so far has failed to give him notice of the Tuesday contract talks. Instead, he has dealt individually with the companies and associations which employ Moody as head of their bargaining association and has hinted to them that he might oppose admitting Moody.

Moody told the United Press that he has been given bargaining authority by some of the companies specifically and will attend the wage conferences nevertheless.

The conference also may receive a demand from H. K. Cook, president of the Diamond Coal Mining Co., Knoxville, Tenn., that he be allowed to negotiate personally. Cook has been soliciting proxies from producers in the South and Middle West to represent them.

Lewis meets today with his 200-man wage policy committee to prepare for the opening of the anthracite contract talks May 27 at Philadelphia. The soft coal contract expires June 30 and the hard coal agreement can be terminated July 10.

Two Die as Locomotive Plunges Into River

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

76 PASSENGERS UNHURT.—This was the wreck scene after a Delaware & Lackawanna Railroad locomotive and milk car toppled down an embankment into the Delaware River early yesterday as the train began its tortuous run through scenic Water Gap, in Pennsylvania. The engineman, Al Engetti, and fireman, D. Krushinski, were trapped in the cab and killed. Cause of the derailment, which occurred on a slight curve, was not known. Seventy-six passengers escaped unhurt when seven other cars stayed on the rails and coasted to a stop 200 yards from the wreck scene. Passengers were riding in the last two cars

Taft Favors Repeal of U. S. Oleo Taxes

By the United Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said yesterday he favors repealing Federal taxes on oleomargarine but thinks restaurants should be forbidden to palm it off as butter.

The chairman of the GOP Senate Policy Committee is a member of the Senate Finance Committee which opens hearings today on the House-passed bill to abolish Federal oleo levies.

About 30 pro-oleo witnesses, including Undersecretary of the Treasury A. L. M. Wiggins, are scheduled to testify. Dairy State representatives who want the taxes retained will have their day Tuesday.

A majority of Senators have indicated they are for the bill, but Taft raised the possibility that it might not get to the floor for a final vote before the scheduled political convention adjournment next month.

He pointed out that a number of high-priority bills, including draft legislation and a long-range farm program, must be handled first.

Antioleo Senators have promised a last-ditch fight against the bill when it reaches the floor, and Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) has hinted there may be a filibuster.

ABC Network Offers Public Common Stock

New York, May 16 (AP).—Public participation in ownership of the American Broadcasting Co. was opened up today for the first time with the offering of 500,000 shares of common stock at $9 a share.

The stock was offered for sale by a group of investment bankers headed by Dillon, Read & Co.

Money from sale of the stock and five million dollars in 4 per cent promissory notes maturing in 1960 will be used to refinance the radio network and to help pay for its television construction program.

The new stock issue will bring the total number of common shares to 1,688,017. The existing shares are privately held.

The network originated in 1927 as part of the National Broadcasting Co. and was called the blue network of NBC, which at the same time operated what it called its red network.

The Federal Communications Commission later adopted a rule against single ownership of more than one network, and the Radio Corporation of America sold the blue network in 1943, to Edward J. Noble, now board chairman of ABC.

Part of the funds raised by the sale of stock and notes will be used to pay off a four-million-dollar loan used in buying the network from RCA.

ABC owns and operates both standard and frequency modulation stations in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Detroit and San Francisco. It also furnishes programs to 252 affiliated stations.

The network has budgeted $5,325,000 for television and has announced that all five of its television stations will be on the air by the end of the year.

Federal Deposit Unit Plans To Turn Back Federal Funds

By the Associated Press

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation expects to finish turning back to the Government this year the 289 million dollars put up to get the FDIC started in 1934.

Maple T. Harl, chairman of the bank deposit insuring organization, announced last night the FDIC has turned back 246 million dollars so far and expects to return the other 43 million dollars before the end of 1948.

The FDIC then will be financed "entirely by insured (private) banks in the interest of their depositors," but it will continue to be an agency of the Government, Harl said in a statement.

In the FDIC's 14-year period of operations, Harl said, 407 insured banks have been closed because of financial difficulties, and all but three of these have required financial aid from the FDIC. The other 404 banks, with 1,323,977 depositors having 12 million dollars in the banks, were liquidated or merged with other banks under FDIC supervision.

Leaders Of Youth

It is a strange coincidence that two outstanding figures in the youth movements of this country should have passed this life on the same day last week. The Right Rev. E. J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town in Nebraska, died Saturday morning in Germany where he was making a survey of youth facilities at the invitation of the United States Army. Dr. James E. West, for 32 years chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America before his retirement in 1943, died at New Rochelle, N. Y., on Saturday evening. Each had made a truly great contribution to the social well-being of the country of which they were a part.

Dr. West, who faced life as an orphan and a cripple in his youth, built up the Boy Scouts from a young and anemic organization of 61,495 boys and leaders in 1911 to a Nation-wide force for good consisting of 1,553,080 Scouts and leaders when he retired five years ago. He succeeded in making vigorous and healthful outdoor activity and self-discipline a normal experience for millions of boys at that period of life when delinquency begins to become a serious problem. Father Flanagan, who founded his work with the younger generation on the belief that "there is no such thing as a bad boy," proved beyond cavil that the right kind of environment can lift up youngsters seemingly lost in crime to lives of usefulness. His Boys Town is significant not only for its own work but also for the influence it has had upon methods of dealing with youth. The Nation may well congratulate itself that men of the caliber of Father Flanagan and Dr. West are willing to devote their lives to the never-finished task of building character in the men of tomorrow.

Discounts On Salt

The Supreme Court decision in the case of the Federal Trade Commission vs. Morton Salt Co. will be received with rejoicing by small wholesalers and retailers, while mass distributors, such as the food chains, that purchase their supplies in large quantities will be far from happy. The consumer likewise has an interest in this precedent-making decision because of its widespread effects on the sales policies of all sorts of manufacturers and distributors.

The case before the court concerned an order of the Federal Trade Commission directing the Morton Salt Co. to cease granting certain quantity discounts on the ground that they were discriminatory and might substantially lessen competition. The court pointed out, for example, that only five large retail chain stores had ever bought sufficient quantities of the company's finest brand of table salt in any single year to obtain the maximum quantity discount given by the company. As a result these chain stores were able to sell Blue Label salt at retail cheaper than wholesaler purchasers of the company's salt could reasonably sell the same brand to independently operated retail stores, many of which compete with local outlets of the chain stores.

However, the competitive advantages of quantity discounts of this sort would not of itself make the practice illegal. For the Robinson-Patman Act, which the FTC relied upon in issuing its restraining order, does not disbar all quantity discounts. It simply makes it unlawful to receive or grant such discounts unless they are (1) justified by actual differences in cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are sold or delivered or (2) constitute reductions made in good faith to meet a competitor's price. The burden of proof that the discount in the present instance was based on actual savings rested on the seller who, the Supreme Court said, had failed to provide such proof. The Court concluded finally—and this is the crux of its decision—that "the statute does not require that the discrimination must, in fact, have harmed competition, but only that there is a reasonable possibility (italics ours) that they may have that effect."

This is indeed sweeping language—so sweeping, indeed, as to bring a dissent from Justice Jackson, who maintains that the decision constitutes a new interpretation of the Robinson-Patman Act. "The law of this case in a nutshell," he says, "is that no quantity discount is valid if the (Federal Trade) commission chooses to say it is not. That is not the law which Congress enacted and which the court has uniformly stated until today."

Unquestionably the decision greatly strengthens the position of the FTC in dealing with similar cases of price discounts that it considers excessive. As Gilbert H. Montague, an outstanding authority on anti-trust laws, points out, in future the commission will not have to supply so much evidence as formerly to prove that competition has been injured, since the Supreme Court has held that the very fact that discounts are granted creates a reasonable probability that unlawful price discriminations may exist.

A Partisan Blunder

By a strictly partisan vote the Ways and Means Committee has approved a bill limiting extension of the Trade Agreements Act to one year and imposing crippling restrictions on the executive power to raise or lower tariffs. Enactment of this bill would amount to repudiation of the trade-agreements program that is, as President Truman says, "an essential and integral part of our national policy of seeking, through cooperation with other nations, to advance prosperity and peace at home and in all other countries." For it would entail nothing less than a scrapping of the machinery that has been set up for lowering trade barriers by direct negotiation through the Department of State.

Prior to negotiation the President, through the Department of State, would have to secure approval of proposed tariff changes from the Tariff Commission. That body would hold public hearings before rendering its decisions. Consequently no trade agreements could be negotiated without preliminary discussions and often heated debates that would delay action. The treaty-making powers exercised by the Department of State under the reciprocal trade-agreements program would, in effect, be transferred to the Tariff Commission. And in the event that the department failed to abide by the commission's recommendations, Congress could veto an offending trade agreement by passing a concurrent resolution of disapproval through both houses. As a result, the door would be open for a return, in a less aggravated form, to be sure, of the conflicts between special interest groups and the political deals that used to be an inseparable accompaniment of tariff revision.

Such a change of policy would inevitably be viewed with alarm by other nations as proof of Republican dissatisfaction with the system under which the country has been operating to bring about lower tariffs since 1934. Republican protestations to the contrary, passage of the bill by Congress, even if it encountered a presidential veto, would arouse fears that a Republican victory next November would imply early abdication of our role as a leader in the movement to reduce barriers to international trade.

Politically speaking, too, the Republican majority in Congress have more to lose than to gain by attacking the reciprocal trade program at this inopportune time. Undoubtedly many members of Congress are embarrassed by their past professions of hostility to executive tariff-making, and are reluctant to go on record in favor of an unqualified extension of the program. But Republican and Democratic legislators alike are now committed to a program for furthering world recovery that has as one of its objectives the lowering of trade barriers. Any action on their part that gives rise to suspicion that they are not in sympathy with that goal is more likely to alienate than attract political support. A vote for extension of the program for the next three years in its present form would prevent the question of tariff policy from becoming a campaign issue, and leave the whole question of possible modifications to be threshed out by the new Administration. By maintaining the status quo during this pre-election period it will be possible to avoid unnecessary trouble at home and at the same time allay the doubts and fears of other nations that are relying on this country for aid and advice.

Union Looters

Five years have passed since a special District grand jury began an investigation of the tangled financial affairs of local affiliates of the International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers Union. That investigation resulted in the indictment nearly a year later of 13 officials of the international and local unions on charges of conspiracy and embezzlement of union funds. The evidence showed that the take from the raided union treasuries, amounting to nearly $100,000, was used to finance a local night club, to buy large stocks of liquor, to pay for improvements on private homes and to build houses. The profits and rentals from these investments were, of course, the perquisites of the looters.

Since 1944, when indictments were handed down, two of the men indicted have died. Another, Larry Kelly, allegedly the ringleader of the conspiracy, disappeared while the grand jury investigation was in progress and is believed to be dead. The charges against three officials of the international union who were named as defendants in the District court embezzlement trial were dismissed by Justice Holtzoff for lack of evidence. A former president of one of the local unions was also acquitted later for lack of sufficient evidence to convict, while charges against Kelly's wife were voluntarily dismissed by the Government. The five remaining defendants were convicted last week and have been released on bail pending appeal from the decision.

The law's delays and the escape from punishment of certain officials whose criminal carelessness and obstructionist tactics are believed to be responsible to a large extent for the depredations of the local ring emphasize the fact that the protection of union members from gangsters lies rather in preventive action than in punishment of detected crimes. In our opinion, this case provides the strongest possible argument for regulation by law of union finances as required by the Taft-Hartley Act. That measure calls for detailed reports on union receipts and expenditures, and the auditing of financial transactions, as well as other pertinent information regarding official salaries, dues, fees, etc. Although regulatory safeguards of this sort cannot, in the nature of the case, insure complete protection against misappropriation of union funds, they certainly discourage the kind of organized looting that was facilitated in the present instance by loose financial practices and by an organizational setup that made it extremely difficult to dislodge dishonest officials.

Investigating Hawaii

What hope remains for Hawaiian Statehood legislation in this session of Congress is embodied in the Knowland resolution scheduled to be brought up this week on the Senate floor. Senator Knowland proposes to discharge the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs from further consideration of the Statehood enabling bill and place it before the Senate as a whole. This cannot be considered a slight to the committee, for it had 10 months in which to act after the House passed the companion bill last summer. Members of the committee had a chance to conduct an on-the-spot study this winter if they had wished; the one member who did go to Hawaii as a subcommittee, Senator Cordon, returned with a warm indorsement of Statehood now.

Senators should take a lively interest in the resolution if for no other reason than that the pledge of Statehood was contained in the 1944 platforms of both major political parties. The 7-5 decision of the committee to delay action in favor of another investigation amounts to a negation of that pledge and, if allowed to stand, would make futile the good work of the House. Moreover, the close vote by which the committee turned down the Statehood bill emphasizes the desirability of bringing the matter to the attention of the entire Senate.

As compelling a statement as we have seen of the justification for Hawaiian Statehood now comes from Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska, himself the executive of a disfranchised Territory:

> Hawaii is the finest example under the flag of the welding of alien peoples of diverse racial strain into Americans. America is above all else an idea . . . I do not know how we can better manifest our faith in that idea and aid in its spread than by admitting to Statehood a community of Americans who have more than met every test and who are peculiarly and strikingly the embodiment of that idea.

What Governor Gruening says applies with particular relevance to the suggestion of another investigation, this time on the subject of communism in the islands. Hawaii already has been surfeited with investigations. There is no reason to believe that communism is any more prevalent in Hawaii than anywhere else in the American Union; indeed, conditions in Hawaii are such as to discourage its growth. This much, however, is certain: further delay in granting residents of Hawaii the rights promised them on annexation 50 years ago would give the Communists an excellent sounding board. For what purpose does Territoryship exist if not to prepare such communities for full-fledged membership in the Union?

Reservist Disability

Adequately manned and trained reserve components of the armed forces are essential to the security organization the country is attempting to build. It follows that if the reserve organizations are to be successful in recruiting their full strength, reservists must be assured of protection for themselves and their families when they are injured while undergoing training. Such is not now the case. Though provisions differ between the individual services, in general members of the reserves who are called to active duty for short periods or who perform inactive duty training are eligible at the most for limited hospitalization privileges.

A particularly poignant case showing the unfairness of the present statutes involved a Marine Reserve aviator whose plane crashed last summer during training at Cherry Point. The officer, a combat veteran, lost a hand. Though he was no longer able to pursue his civilian occupation as a commercial airline pilot, he was entitled to no disability benefit other than that under workmen's compensation laws. Obviously the knowledge that they have no real protection in such situations acts as a discouragement to many persons participating in reserve programs.

Two bills are now before Congress to correct this disparity by making reservists on active duty or inactive duty training eligible for the same benefits with respect to hospitalization and retirement as members of the regular forces. The benefits would be made retroactive to 1945, to cover cases that have occurred since the war. One of these bills, introduced by Representative Margaret Chase Smith, is scheduled to come before the House Armed Services Committee this week. We hope the bill will be reported out and enacted. Its passage need not prejudice the comprehensive review of disability and retirement laws that the services have been seeking. But until such a review is made, reservists should not be placed at a positive disadvantage by service to their country.

THE LITTLE NATION

Having no gift of strategy, no arms,
No secret weapon and no walled defense,
I shall become a citizen of love,
That little nation with the blood-stained sod
Where even the slain have power, the only country
That sends forth an ambassador to God.

Renouncing self and crying out to evil
To end its wars, I seek a land that lies
All unprotected like a sleeping child,
Nor is my journey reckless and unwise.
Who doubts that love has an effective weapon,

D. C. Sales Tax

It is my belief that the great mass of wage earners of average, or less-than-average incomes in the District would find it to their advantage to pay District income tax, whether legally domiciled here or not, in preference to the proposed sales tax of 2 per cent.

For example: a salaried man with two dependents on a taxable income of approximately $3200 would pay a District income tax of something like $9.50 or $10. If the sales tax becomes effective he will find himself paying $64 annually.

Even assuming that groceries are exempted from the taxable items, and allowing $1000 for this item, he would still pay $44 tax. I doubt that additional reductions for medical bills and religious and charitable contributions would bring his total sales tax expenditure anywhere near the lesser amount he would pay in District income tax.

Again, some portion of his income is taxed at a high rate, such as the assessment on telegraph and telephone tolls, theater tickets, railroad fares, etc. Then there is the 20 per cent luxury tax which must be paid on items that some of us do not regard as luxuries, such as women's purses, toiletries, and possible luggage. And on top of all, the Federal income tax.

The proposed sales tax will hit hardest those least able to bear the blow—the mass of middle-class people whose purchases make up the greater part of the revenue of Washington merchants. Only to the fortunate ones who can afford luxuries would it be, as the unthinking have labeled it, a nuisance of pennies.

Bipartisan Farce

Understandable is Secretary Marshall's plea for continuation of the bipartisan combine on foreign policy. It saves him from criticism of his bungling policies, such as that which has now brought chaos and war to Palestine.

The American people need to understand, however, that this combine is one of the most dangerous attacks ever made upon their democratic institutions. For through it a small group of Washington politicians have arrogated unto themselves determination of foreign policies, which the Constitution presumably vested in the people.

The one-party system in Russia makes "democracy" there a farce. The poor Russians have only a choice between Stalin and Stalin. But the Truman-Vandenberg combine, in the vital area of foreign policy, makes democracy here just as much a farce. Next fall our choice will be to indorse present policies by voting Democratic or to indorse them by voting Republican. Possibility of a protest-vote was denied most of us when Henry Wallace invited Communist support.

It is indeed appalling to find such national leaders as the President, Senators Vandenberg and Connally and Secretary Marshall so lacking in confidence in democratic decisions that they enter into a plan the sole purpose of which is to deny the people an opportunity to influence foreign policy. If the people's judgment in this vital area is unsafe, why trust it anywhere?

This bipartisan combine gives Secretary Marshall the appearance of having the united support of the Nation, whereas millions, perhaps a majority of the American people, are deeply disturbed by the rapidity by which we are being rushed toward World War III and the probable destruction of civilization by atomic weapons. Some Republican candidate can do the Nation the greatest possible service if he will break away from this pernicious bipartisan agreement and give the people a chance to repudiate, if they wish to do so, the inept policies of the present Administration.

Watergate Concerts

Dear Sirs:

It was with great disappointment that we learned of the discontinuance of the renowned Watergate concerts.

It seems almost tragic that Washingtonians and countless visitors will be deprived of this excellent entertainment.

We would like to suggest that The Washington Post along with the other Washington newspapers undertake a campaign to raise funds for this worthy cause.

We as a group of teen-agers and young adults would be more than willing to contribute in the hope that others would follow our example.

Greek Executions

The first week of May, 1948, will be recorded in the history of Greece as one of the blackest weeks in the annals of Greek mankind. One hundred fifty-two people, men and women, were shot in one day—the third of May.

The crime for which these people were shot is that they took part in an uprising in December, 1944, fighting for their freedom. Was it a crime? To revolt and fight for freedom? Our own American Nation was founded as a result of such an uprising.

The Greek people, after fighting the Nazis for four years, refused to allow their freedom to be denied by the English and rose up in December, 1944, demanding the evacuation of the British army. Men, women and children started to march unarmed to Athens. They were ordered to stop and when they refused they were fired upon. Since then none of the English who fired upon the innocent and unarmed Greeks have been punished in any way for their murder of the people. But 1400 Greeks were convicted and sentenced to die because they took part in an uprising for their freedom.

These 1400 Greeks were jailed in jails all over Greece where they have been kept for four years. Now they are being taken out in groups and being executed at the whim of the present Greek government under the domination of America.

"Marginal Sea"

I would like to commend your May 5 editorial "Marginal Sea" anent the tidelands oil bill to the attention of all persons interested in the future welfare of these United States. It is certainly a sad commentary on the intelligence, information, devotion to the national welfare, and long term thinking of our House of Representatives that such a bill could be passed with a 257-29 vote, the specious arguments of the oil lobby masquerading under the banner of States' rights to the contrary.

In many unbiased expert opinions, the potential oil bearing structures underlying these marginal seas represent the last probable major source of petroleum in the continental United States. As pointed out in the recent report of the Short Subcommittee of the House Armed Forces Committee the situation, even now, is very critical as regards our oil supplies in case of war. The ruthless and wasteful commercial exploitation of our oil resources under the control or lack of control of the individual States is largely responsible for such a dangerous condition. Are we to deliver up to these same forces our one remaining ace in the hole which might well mean the difference between life and death to this country?

Informed naval authorities are frankly and publicly greatly concerned over the efficiency of the modern high speed submarine against which they have announced they have no adequate defense as yet. Our potential enemies are not unacquainted with the historical fact that in two wars the western democracies had hairbreadth escapes from decisive defeat by a relatively few inefficient submarines. Unless strong steps are taken in the near future to conserve our domestic supplies of petroleum and develop the tidelands oil, and hold them in reserve against a national emergency, we will soon be dependent on foreign waterborne sources of oil likely to be cut off by a successful submarine campaign.

Should such occur our national defense, industry transportation, and agriculture would collapse like a stack of cards. The synthetic industry that can replace natural petroleum is many billions of dollars, millions of tons of steel, billions of man-hours labor, and last but not least, many hundreds of days in the future.

Some of our more befuddled amateur strategists on the Hill would defeat the submarine by building thousands of long range, high speed, transports and bomber planes. Such thinking is a very dangerous thing should it prevail, as appears likely because of political rationalization aimed at defeating the draft and UMT. The holders of such views should be forced to go back to the nearest airline headquarters and make a study of the distance versus pay load problems of air transport. They would find that at the distances likely to be involved in the next war, the airplane for transport purposes would become literally a flying container carrying fuel and supplies for its own consumption.

They would learn the cost of speed, that fuel consumption per ton mile goes up roughly as the square of the speed. In other words it requires roughly 900 times as much fuel to deliver supplies to advance bases or beleaguered allies at 300 m.p.h as it does to deliver at 10 m. p. h. Even if we had the thousands of air transports envisaged by our air enthusiasts there is simply not enough airplane fuel available to deliver more than a minuscule percentage of the supply tonnage likely to be required by advance bases and allies.

Drawing from these fundamental considerations and the present world strategical picture it is obvious that, as in World War I and II, the opening and crucial phase of another war will almost surely be a fight to keep our sea lanes open to our allies and overseas bases against the opposition of the modern submarine and possibly to prevent these submarines from bombing our exposed vital centers on the coast using rocket propelled missiles, etc. We cannot win a war in this defense effort but we could surely lose it in a hurry should an enemy succeed in making a severe stoppage of waterborne traffic, particularly if this country should let its domestic supplies of petroleum fall below that necessary to prosecute a war, an almost inevitable consequence of turning over our tideland reserves to commercialistic exploitation under the control of State governments.

Matter Of Fact

Stassen In Action

KLAMATH FALLS, Oreg.—The strangest aspect of this strange, decisive Oregon primary is the opportunity of seeing men running for the Presidency as though they were running for county sheriff. Harold E. Stassen and Thomas E. Dewey both appear, so to speak, in the sweaty undress of candidates who must sniff out the last, lingering vote in Lovely Street and Possum Hollow. And since they have torn off their official togas for the struggle, the real men are suddenly on view, with all their wens, warts and other distinguishing marks. Occasionally, it is an odd spectacle.

From this ordeal, Harold Stassen emerges as probably the most remarkable younger leader American public life has produced since the beginning of the Roosevelt era. He has, first of all, stature. Nature made him a very big man, with a head so large that it seems almost out of proportion to his small, rather regular features. Early middle age has added a good deal to nature's original design, so that in mere bulk he dwarfs all the thousands who daily swarm to hear him and to shake his hand.

His bulk helps him, undoubtedly, yet it is far from being bulk which mainly contributes to this initial impression of the size of the man. Determination, coolness and good humor in difficulty, a certain obvious solidity of character, an agreeable plainness and absence of calculated graces, an extraordinary self-confidence and feeling of power—these are some of the traits which permit him to dominate without great effort, the uncounted gatherings that he addresses daily.

Only an inherently big man would avoid looking ridiculous as a presidential candidate, and still go through this routine of bus trips, plane journeys, stops to be nice to school children, stops to speak in front of railroad stations, ceremonial greetings by Indians, luncheons in grange halls and public dinners of tired fried hen and pallid canned peas.

Here in Oregon, Stassen is attempting no Gladstonian Midlothian campaign, with one great exposition of a complex subject following another up to a crashing climax. The speech is always the same speech.

"I bring a message of confidence in America"—"We must build a better future"—"I have always favored reclamation" (or irrigation, or whatever the local interest may be)—"We must remain strong"—"The Communists cannot be allowed to attack our system both overground and underground." The same points are always applauded, especially the attacks on the Communists. There are even the same jokes, that get a laugh although they appear to have been borrowed from the collection of anecdotes in Sigmund Freud's essay on humor, which comprises the unfunniest funny stories in the world.

After the speech there is the question period. In town after town, the questions also form a pattern (U. M. T., Russia, the cost of living, the Taft-Hartley Act), but they are shrewd and to the point. Stassen answers them plainly, brings the meeting to a close adroitly, and then shakes hands with a couple of hundred of the crowd. After that there is a reception of notables, and then the barnstorming party sets off again for its next date.

Again, however, one also notices a certain coldness and ruthlessness in estimating human beings. One one occasion, for instance, Stassen made a monkey out of Dewey simply by figuring out exacly what Dewey would do. Their buses were to pass on the same road. Stassen's bus was halted, to greet school children, at a town where Dewey was also to stop. Stassen delayed his bus until Dewey's hove into view. The whole crowd prepared for a genial meeting between candidates. The attendant photographers even made a sort of half-roadblock with a truck, but Dewey ordered his bus not to stop; and while Stassen waved and grinned, his rival was only observed peering out a window with a sickly grin, almost visibly ticketed "bad sport." On much larger scale, this kind of cool calculation must have entered largely into Stassen's meteoric rise.

Then, too, another ingredient of Stassen's success also becomes evident. The staff accompanying him is largely composed of men in their thirties, mere babies in politics. They give substance to the finest tribute Stassen has ever had, which came from an adherent of Senator Robert A. Taft, who said bitterly, "If that man gets in, the old Republican Party we've always known won't be the same party any more." Stassen has shaped his young men into an organization of unparalleled efficiency. He is one of the most effective political organizers of our time.

When one adds up these different qualities of Stassen's, and stacks them up with his performance here in Oregon and on the long political journey that has led to Oregon, a picture begins to form. It is the picture of a political leader, with all the complexities and inner contradictions that strong leaders always have, with real power, with real feeling for this country, with much else that is important. The one question still remains, however, and this, oddly enough, is a query as to Stassen's true political views.

Mr. Lalley's column will be resumed on his return from vacation.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Unbuttoned Diplomacy

Lippmann

IF THE Administration is not careful, it is going to get into another messy muddle—this time with Great Britain. On the critically important matter of our relations with the sterling area Mr. Harriman in a press interview in London has said that we are considering our policy without saying what our policy is.

Now the exchange rate of the dollar and the pound sterling—the two leading currencies of the world—is known to be vulnerable, subject to speculative raids, to illicit transactions, and to frightened withdrawals. In dealing with a highly sensitive matter of this kind to announce that you are considering a policy—before you have in fact considered it, formulated it, and reached agreement about it—is to make much more difficult the problem that you hope to solve when you have considered your policy.

THIS IS emphatically a subject which no one with Mr. Harriman's responsibility ought to say anything about publicly until full agreement has been reached in private between the British government and the American on the rate at which we are prepared to make the pound and the dollar freely convertible. The mere suggestion that in this matter there could be an American policy, as distinct from a British-American policy, is dangerous, and should promptly be disavowed.

For the world's business, and the European recovery program, require a joint solution of the problem of the pound and the dollar, and the merest hint that the Administration could consider a unilateral American policy is to introduce a new element of disorder into a situation which is very precarious.

HERE AGAIN, as in the Smith-Molotov episode, there is no lack of good intentions, but a surprising want of the knowledge of how great public affairs are conducted. Would anyone who had to run a country bank announce in the newspapers that some day, when he got around to it, he would announce plans for reorganization of the bank? Or would anyone who wished to talk privately on an important matter fail to make it clear that the conversation was meant to be private?

THE SMITH-MOLOTOV episode, and the spectacle in Washington which followed it, show, it seems to me, that the most urgent business of the State Department is to think out carefully how it is going to conduct its diplomacy. The "American policy makers" would do well to take time out from policy making in order to make up their minds about the technique and procedure of diplomatic intercourse, not only with Russia but also with our partners and allies.

For that is where they came a cropper in this recent affair. It is quite true that Ambassador Smith's statement to Molotov marked no change in American policy on any question at issue. But it marked the adoption of a different procedure and technique for dealing with the Soviet government. It was an experiment in the revival of the classic method of diplomacy—which is to exchange carefully drafted documents that are treated as confidential until there is an agreement to publish them. This diplomatic method is in constant use as between the United States and Great Britain, France, and almost every other country, including the Arab states and the Russian satellite states. In minor matters it is used even with the Soviet Union.

The novelty in the affair of May 4 was the use of this same method to begin discussions of the great issues which have proved insoluble in conferences and in the U. N.

THERE IS no reason to suppose that Mr. Molotov would have refused to try the method if it had been made plain to him that we were trying a different method. It is said that you cannot trust the Russians and that if it suited them, they would have published the statements. They could not and would not have published our statement if it had been preceded by an inquiry as to whether the Soviet government cared to receive a confidential statement which was not to be published except by agreement. And there would have been no misunderstanding in London and Paris if in the inquiry we had also said that we intended to communicate the contents of the statement to London and Paris as soon as we had received a reply from Mr. Molotov.

These details of procedure cannot be neglected in diplomacy. Without them, a policy however well conceived, can be as embarrassing as a suit of clothes, however well designed, on which the tailor has forgotten to sew the buttons.

'Carefree Childhood' of U. S. Over, Says Senate Chaplain

Whatever advice the United States gives in Palestine, it now must implement, Dr. Peter Marshall, chaplain of the United States Senate and pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, told his congregation yesterday.

"The days when Americans can hand out advice and do nothin about it are over," he said. "Th British are out of Palestine and we are in. Truman put us in. We are committed. We are on the side of the Jews. Whatever advice we give now we have to implement. Talking is no longer cheap."

The pastor told his morning congregation the United States and Russia are the only nations today capable "of being responsible for the peace of the world."

For the United States, he said the alternatives are clear.

"Either she lets the Soviet Union police the world (and they are more than willing to do it)," he said, "or she must do it herself. That means we Americans must grow up. Our days of carefree childhood are over."

He noted that we have military advisers in Greece, a fleet in the Mediterranean, armies in Germany, Austria and Korea, and we occupy Japan.

"We must export our ideas as the Communists export theirs," he said. "It is all very well to send over wheat and money, but unless ideas accompany them—ideas that can fire men's minds and inspire men's souls—nothing will come of it, except that the people will be saved for communism.

"These ideas are nothing less than Christianity in action. Our faith today must be implemented by our action."

Using "I Am an American Day" as his theme, Dr. Marshall cited the many paradoxes which exist in the United States today.

We have the highest standard of living in the world if we think in terms of gadgets and conveniences, he asserted.

"Yet our living as a nation is on a very low level if we think in terms of crime, the divorce rate, the amount of liquor we drink, gambling, the low moral tone of our best sellers, and the subject matter of many of our plays and motion pictures."

The United States is the only surviving nation on earth ... its origins in settlements dedicated "to the glory of God and for the advancement of the Christian faith."

"Yet the highest court in our land has just decided that we cannot use our public school buildings for religious education," he observed.

Speaking of the time in which the First Amendment to the Constitution was written, Dr. Marshall said, "It was not that they ... to have freedom from religion, but freedom in religion."

"No slums anywhere are worse than those in Washington," he said, speaking of the paradox of our national housing situation. The United States is "one of only two nations on the face of the earth where people are victims of discrimination because of their color."

"While we were shipping vast quantities of grain to feed the starving in Europe, we were unable to persuade the brewers and distillers in America to desist using this precious grain in order to make people drunk," he stated.

"We boast of our rights and take pride in our privileges," Dr. Marshall said, "but we have not yet learned that to every right there is attached a duty, and to every privilege an obligation."

"This is the day when we say: 'I am an American' and God says, 'So what?'"

Nuernberg Prosecutor Backs World Court for Future Cases

The chief American prosecutor in the Nuernberg war crimes trials believes a permanent world court should be set up to handle any such cases in the future.

Taylor

Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor made the observation in press conference here called to announce the imminent closing of the special war court, probably by the end of August.

The U. S. Chief of Counsel for War Crimes declared in a statement for release today that he initely were toward establishment of a world court and that its formation could be expected eventually.

Generally, Taylor said, the Nuernberg trials have established a broad base for furthering international penal law, now a major concern of the United Nations.

Taylor said that after judgments have been returned in the final four cases heard, including the Farben and Krupp trials, the court will be "phased out." Its activities, however, will loom up in increasing importance in the future, he asserted.

In his latest report on the status of the trials, made available for publication today by Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, General Taylor particularly urged that published reports of the court proceedings be made as speedily as possible.

Speedy publication, he said, would:

1. Safeguard the reputation of the judicial process as carried out at Nuernberg.

2. Aid in the development of a workable and enlightened system of international law.

3. Promote the interest in historical truth and aid in the reestablishment of democracy in Germany.

Concerning the part the trials should play in future international law General Taylor declared: "They will be looked to by diplomats and international jurists as the decisions of our own courts are looked to by our statesmen and lawyers."

The former Washington attorney, in press interview, said that conduct of the war trials at Nuernberg proved the special court was "abundantly fair" despite published criticism that the trials were "a moral fraud" which set up a precedent for "a war winner's court" to try war losers.

Taylor, former general counsel to the Federal Communications Commission here from 1940 till he entered the Army as a major in 1942, said he had no personal plans upon closing of the court other than to "return to civil life." He termed public reports he'd return to a high post in the FCC as "purely speculative."

He said he has long rented out his home in Chevy Chase, and that his wife, who was injured in March in an emergency parachute jump over Berlin, and their two children have returned to the family home in Schenectady, N. Y., where he will join them after the court's closing.

Eviction Trial Against Attorney Continues Today

Trial will continue today in Municipal Court of the eviction suit by which a high Navy official and his wife seek to oust a prominent lawyer from his apartment at 2500 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The suit being tried before a jury in the courtroom of Judge George D. Neilson was brought by Mrs. Shannon Clark, who is joined by her husband, Rear Adm. Joseph J. (Jocko) Clark, assistant chief of Naval operations for air.

The Clarks, who own the apartment house, have a court degree for the eviction of their third-floor tenant, and are now seeking to oust Huston Thompson, attorney and former Federal Trade Commission chairman, from the first-floor apartment.

The two apartments which total 3000 square feet are sought by the ... for the occupancy by ... selves and family. Vice Admiral Emory S. Land occupies the second floor apartment, but the Clarks do not seek his ouster.

Greek 'Horror' Condemned by British Labor

Scarborough, England, May 16 (NYHT).—The national executive committee of the British Labor Party, in a resolution adopted tonight on the eve of the party's forty-seventh annual conference, condemned "the horrors being perpetrated in Greece."

The committee decided to expel from the party Alfred Edwards, Labor member of Parliament who has been publicly opposing the Labor government's plans to nationalize the iron and steel industries.

The resolution on Greece, inspired by the recent wave of executions of Communist and other rebels, called on the Greek government "in spite of all provocations not to resort to any but legal means" in dealing with Greece's problem.

Particularly condemned by the resolutions were such "horrors" as "raiding villages, killing noncombatants, abducting children and rendering homeless peaceful citizens."

The committee was careful in drafting its resolution to spread blame for the Greek developments on the rebel forces as well as the government.

The action against Edwards for his right-wing activities served to counter the committee's decision three weeks ago to expel John Platts-Mills, another Labor MP, for pro-Communist activities.

The conference will open tomorrow with a speech by Emanuel Shinwell, chairman of the party and war minister in the government. Approximately 1100 delegates are expected, making it the biggest conference in the party's history.

State of Siege Still in Force In Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, May 16 (U.P.). The state of siege proclaimed in Colombia after the bloody April 9 riots will continue until a federal police force has been organized to replace discredited local forces, authoritative sources said today.

The government has already announced that police experts either from Canada or the United States will be imported to aid the reorganization of the Colombian force.

Most of Colombia's pre-riot policemen have been dismissed because of their failure to halt the disorders. Some are awaiting trial on charges that they joined the mobs and armed the rioters.

Soldiers and sailors are performing routine police functions.

A spokesman for the ousted policemen said today they were unable to cope with the rioters because the radio stations seized by the mob immediately after the assassination of Liberal leader Jorge Eliecer Gaitan were blaring the false charge that Gaitan had been killed by a policeman.

Warren Stresses Civil Rights Plank

Sacramento, Calif., May 16 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren gave the Nation today his platform as a Republican presidential candidate — putting civil rights up in front.

In a Nation-wide radio broadcast (NBC) the Governor, deploring "vote-catching phrases," outlined what he thought should be in the GOP 1948 platform and listed as No. 1:

"A law for all men—a law under which everyone may enjoy the full exercise or rights of American citizenship."

His speech followed by a day a State Republican meeting at Santa Cruz where his backers agreed upon a move to extend the Warren campaign into other States.

Other Warren-advocated planks:

1. The opportunity for every family to live in a neighborhood of decent homes, with adequate protection to the breadwinner against involuntary unemployment caused by illness or economic reasons.

2. An expanded system of Social Security for those men and women decreed by industry to be unemployable although their span of life has been extended by the progress of medical science.

3. Rules of conduct for employer and employe which are fair, recognizing the obligations of both to the general public.

4. A system within the means of each family under which it could preserve its health and insure its wealth-producing capacity.

5. An educational system which would give every American child regardless of creed, race or residence . . . the basic education which will enable him to make a living in the field of his choice.

Newsmen Barred At Hollywood Wallace Banquet

Hollywood, May 16 (AP).—Reporters found themselves unwelcome at a private banquet for third party candidate Henry A. Wallace last night.

Some 450 diners, paying $10 a plate and contributing some $29,000 to the Wallace campaign fund, heard the presidential hopeful give an off-the-record speech at a hotel.

But reporters who tried to gain admittance were barred. When asked why, C. B. Baldwin, campaign manager, was quoted as saying: "That's our business."

Adrian Scott, one of the 10 congressional witnesses in recent contempt proceedings, also was on the speaking program.

Portland, Oreg., May 16 (AP).—Oregon's unpredictable and sometimes amazing Republican presidential primary campaign enters its final stages this week a touch-and-go affair.

Today, less than a week from Friday's balloting, Republican sentiment appeared about evenly divided between Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Harold E. Stassen. Most Oregonians rated it a toss-up.

On the strength of two weeks of beating the political bushes, however, it was clear that Dewey was riding a surge of popularity that had overcome the heavy deficit he faced on his arrival May 1.

Stassen, on the other hand, carried in reserve an important backlog of sentiment built up in his favor in the course of four trips to the State in the past year. This was reflected in the air of confidence displayed by the Minnesotan and his supporters.

In an unprecedented day's travel yesterday Stassen covered nearly 800 miles of Oregon by plane and bus. His final appearance of the day was an impromptu rally at the airport upon his return here shortly before midnight.

For his part, Dewey put in a 16-hour day jolting by bus over coastal highways in northwest Oregon before getting back to Portland at 1:30 a. m.

Both of them announced today to the corps of reporters traveling in their camps that they had accepted invitations to pay "courtesy calls" on Gov. Earl Warren of California. Warren, a Republican dark horse, controls California's big block of 62 convention votes.

Session-End Bill Log Jam Faces Congress

By the Associated Press

Congress is facing what threatens to be a terrific session-end log jam of legislation—or a wholesale dumping of major bills along the way.

Time is short. There are just 25 normal work days before the Republican National Convention on June 21 will bring lawmaking to a halt.

The must list of bills includes appropriations to run the Government the next fiscal year. Money bills invariably bring last-minute trouble.

House Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) said yesterday that legislation is piling up at a rate that may make it necessary for Congress to return after the Republican meeting in Philadelphia. It might squeeze in 10 days of work before the Democrats gather there on July 12 for their own convention.

Chairman Taft of the Republican policy makers in the Senate declares action soon must be limited to bills which have a reasonable chance to pass. No hard-and-fast priority list has been announced.

The vast European Recovery Program depends on pending appropriations. It is operating temporarily on funds already set up.

Ten days ago, Taft and his policy committee announced a list of bills for action in the Senate. Since then only one has cleared the Senate calendar. And this was done by sending it back to committee, avoiding a fight. It was the 15-State compact for Southern regional universities.

Monoply Poses Real U. S. Crisis, Wallace Charges

Los Angeles, May 16 (AP).—The monopoly system—not communism—poses the real crisis for the American people, Henry A. Wallace told a Mexican-American gathering here today.

A crowd of about 3000 heard the third-party candidate speak in both Spanish and English.

"I wish I could say that you Mexican-Americans had been rewarded, decently and fairly, for everything you have contributed to California," Wallace said in his opening Spanish remarks. "But you have not been rewarded. And it is a shame upon our country that you have not."

He declared those who talk of war with Russia and claim it is necessary to maintain democracy and the American way of life all over the world are engaged in "a conspiracy against us—all of us—the living and those to come after us."

Union Head Asks Wallace to Quit

New York, May 16 (AP).—A labor leader asked third party leader Henry Wallace today to withdraw from the presidential race or be "condemned as an agent of betrayal and disruption of (labor's) cause."

Max Zaritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap & Millinery Workers International Union (AFL), declared that Wallace "talks labor and acts Communist."

"Without one scintilla of genuine labor support behind him," Zaritsky said, "he has the impudence to speak in labor's name."

The union head said Wallace had been challenged to demonstrate "where, when and how the labor movement has given him a franchise to speak as its spokesman. But he has not met the challenge," Zaritsky said.

Dentist Kills Self In Chair—His Own

Amlwch, Wales, May 16 (AP).—Dentist Arnold G. Marks sat in his dental chair, sealed his mouth with plaster and killed himself with gas from his own anesthetic apparatus, a coroner's jury decided yesterday. A doctor told the jury that Marks, 35, had been worried about a chronic skin disease.

Who Pays for Telephone Expansion?

INVESTORS DO.

They buy telephone bonds and stocks and we use the money to build new telephone facilities.

On the other hand, the money you pay us for telephone service is used for wages, taxes, depreciation and other day-by-day operating costs.

So when you read about the millions of dollars we are putting into our expansion program—or see a new telephone building going up—you can be sure that investors' money is being put to work to expand and improve the telephone service you use.

Thus, we use two kinds of dollars: Customers' dollars—payments received for telephone service—are used to meet day-by-day operating costs.

Investors' dollars—savings of people from all walks of life who invest in the telephone business—are used to put up buildings and buy new equipment.

Hospital Care Given 2651 in 3 Months

Hospital care was provided 2651 indigent or semi-indigent patients in Greater Washington during the first three months of 1948, the Health Security Administration announced yesterday.

The HSA, which acts as a central admitting bureau for hospitals in this area, said this represents an increase of 27 per cent in the number of charity hospital patients over the same period in 1947.

A total of 24,674 in-patient days care was provided the 2651 patients during the first quarter of this year. This was an increase of 19 per cent over the 20,737 days provided during the same period of 1947.

Of the 24,674 in-patient days, 18,831 or 76.3 per cent were provided for District residents and 5843 or 23.7 per cent were provided for residents of nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Of the 2651 patients certified by the HSA during this period, 501 or 19 per cent were nonresidents of the District.

Of the Maryland and Virginia residents who were certified for hospital treatment, 151 were from Prince Georges County, 109 from Fairfax County, 109 from Arlington County and the remaining 132 from Alexandria, Montgomery County, Prince William County and Fauquier County.

"Remember, dear—

HAPPINESS doesn't just happen!"

It takes sense as well as sentiment to make a marriage tick!

"BECAUSE you're in love, dear, you just know that you will be happy. I felt the same way when I married your father. But our happiness didn't just happen. It took work and planning—and more unselfishness than anything else in my life. The more you give to your marriage, the more you'll get. It's as simple as that!"

Perhaps the most important step for a married couple is to set their goals. Now that you're pulling together as a team, in what direction do you want to go? Do you want to have a nice home . . . children . . . travel . . .? Talk it over. Decide what you want soon—and what you want in the long run. Then set out to get these things, through planning and saving . . . and loving cooperation. That's how dreams come true!

Who should be the boss?—Nobody should! Certain jobs will naturally fall to the wife; others to the husband. Where there's doubt, talk it over, and then decide what's fair. There should be no nagging about how the other does his or her work. Whenever new problems come up, or if big decisions must be made—always work them out together. "Bossing" is bad for any marriage.

"What this country amounts to depends on what happens to its homes." . . . That's why the life insurance companies and their agents are bringing you this series of messages from the nation's foremost authorities, to help you plan for happiness in the handling of your family money. (This is Message No. 36.)

"You see, darling, it's really all up to you!"

Who will handle the money?—That's important; thousands of marriages fail on money problems alone. Usually the cause isn't too little money—it's poor money management.

And that brings us right back to having definite goals. When you know what you want . . . and are saving for it . . . there's far less confusion over who should spend what.

Expect the unexpected! Every family should prepare for the rainy days that come in everyone's life . . . and the sunny days, too. Then, when the time comes, you'll be ready to face any unexpected problem . . . to take advantage of any long-hoped-for opportunity! Your marriage is sure to be different from what you thought it would be. But whether it will be better than you expected—that's up to you!

How to PLAN for Family Happiness

"That's how dreams come true . . ."

● Happiness in marriage depends a great deal on sound money planning. You'll be more likely to have enough money on hand when you need it, if you'll follow these few simple rules:

FOR TODAY . . . The first thing, for most families, is to take care of the larger fixed items such as rent, taxes, insurance, mortgage and installment payments, etc. So start by adding up all your fixed items for the year, divide by 52, and set aside that amount weekly.

Also every family should have a "rainy day" fund equal to at least four weeks' income. Set aside a little every week until you have that much. Then you'll know how much you can spend for food, clothing, heat, light, amusements, and so forth.

FOR TOMORROW . . . We live in a changing world. Family needs and circumstances change . . . living costs . . . taxes. If you have not had your life insurance program reviewed lately, the chances are 2 to 1 that it should be brought up to date.

There are so many ways in which you can use your life insurance, that you should have the life insurance you now own checked to see if it is suited to your needs. This is a service that comes with your life insurance.

The person best equipped to help you with this is the well-trained life insurance agent. Get in touch with your agent, or write your life insurance company. INSTITUTE OF LIFE INSURANCE, 60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

Prayers Said For Assembly Of Churches

Washington Protestant congregations yesterday joined in prayer and intercession for the success of the first Assembly of the World Council of Churches in a service at the Washington Cathedral.

"Never since the first century has Christendom attempted such a global getting-together," Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of Christ Methodist Church, New York, told the hundreds at the service.

Speaking of the events of Pentecost, he said that the 120 persons present at the birth of the church have today grown to 600 million. The World Council of Churches to be held in Amsterdam this summer was organized by members of 135 Christian communions of the world, he noted.

"Now the World Council of Churches is seeking to recapture that which was done at Pentecost," he stated.

If the small body of disciples at Pentecost could spread Christianity as they have, "who will set the limit to what the Council of Churches will do when they come together all in one place?" he asked.

He called upon Christians to recover God's original design for the church, which was created by God, not man.

Dr. Sockman, who is also known for his radio sermons, said there is a great crowd watching the church from the spectators' gallery today, noting that legislators are eager to know what the churches are thinking.

"We are short of preachers," he declared, "but we are more tragically short of laymen who will take the witness chair for the Lord."

He stated that we must seek to regain the original power of the church, which has become "largely a man-made organizational thing," with hired preachers and singers

The Washington service for the World Council was arranged by the Washington Federation of Churches.

To indulge in anti-Semitism is to besmirch your own spiritual ancestors and undermine the basic foundation of western civilization, the Rev. Darby Betts declared yesterday at St. Clements Episcopal Church, Fairlington.

In a sermon attacking anti-Semitism in all its forms, he said that when a synagogue is defiled all Christian churches are defiled.

There was no new church established on Whitsunday, the day of Pentecost, Mr. Betts said, but only a new power given to those Jews who accepted the gospel of Christ.

From this group of Jews came the Christian church, he related.

The Christian church is Jewish in its origin, Jewish in its ideas of God, and Jewish in its insistence upon the supreme worth of man as an individual, Mr. Betts asserted.

"To attack Judaism as a religion is to attack the foundation of Christianity. The destruction of one will lead to the inevitable destruction of the other," he told the Episcopalians.

"No Christian can sit silent through any attack upon the Jew," Mr. Betts maintained, "and manifest the due and right respect for his own religion, his own spiritual forefathers."

D. C. Group Seeks Public Support to Fight Rheumatism

The world has too long borne the ills of rheumatism without fighting back, Dr. Paul Holbrook, president of the American Rheumatism Society, told a Washington audience.

He spoke at an opening rally Friday night to encourage membership in the newly organized D. C. Foundation for Rheumatic Diseases, at the District Medical Society Building, 1718 M st. nw.

Dr. Holbrook, of Tucson, Ariz., declared that with public support toward "an intelligent and scientific attack, it could be made a vanishing disease, just as tuberculosis is becoming a vanishing disease."

German Bishop Sees Rebirth Of Church as God's Miracle

There would be a church in every generation even if all the world tried to forget it, Bishop Hanns Lilje of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Hannover, Germany, declared yesterday.

Speaking at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, the German church leader hailed the existence of the church today as a miracle. He said the church that was born on Pentecost must be reborn every year and in every generation.

"The powerful hand of God and his mysterious plan is working in the life of everyone," Bishop Lilje declared, citing the continued life of the church in war-devastated Germany.

The great miracle of the church, he asserted, is due to the fact that God makes it possible for people to hear and speak the message of Jesus Christ. Because of this, he said, the church in Germany has continued to live.

In all the misery in his homeland today, the Bishop continued, people are able to make a clear distinction between the things that will pass away and the things that will last. "In a world in which so many things are doomed to decline and decay," he concluded, "the church is a living reality."

Auto Gas Use Takes Jump of 10 Pct.

By the United Press

American motorists burned up 10 per cent more gasoline during 1947 than in 1946, the Federal Works Agency reported yesterday.

It said State taxing agencies listed total consumption at 32,751,954,000 gallons. California again led all the States in consumption, using 2,737,906,000 gallons. New York was second, with 1,943,490,000; Pennsylvania third, with 1,801,468,000, and Texas fourth, with 1,708,454,000.

Wyoming showed the sharpest increase in gasoline use, up 15 per cent from 1946.

Altogether, the 48 States took in $1,206,901,000 in gasoline taxes and associated fees. State taxes range from 2 cents a gallon in Missouri to 7 cents a gallon in Florida, Louisiana and Tennessee. The Nation-wide average is 4.25 cents.

Nats Lose to Bosox, 14-5; Drop to Seventh Place

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THOSE 5000 SPECTATORS at the Columbia Club yesterday qualified for at least two superlatives. They were the wettest and the most celebrity-happy golf gallery in history. The national celebs not only brought 'em out in force but kept 'em out in the rain, a tribute both to the fans and the celebrities.

POVICH

Charlie McCarthy set the keynote for the day's high good fun on the first tee where he was escorted by his caddie, Edgar Bergen. "I wanna drive off now while the conditions are good," ad libbed Charlie.

"Whaddaya mean while conditions are good," said Bergen. "It's raining hard."

"That's what I mean," said McCarthy. "I wanna take advantage of the elements. Can't you see it's a driving rain."

The first tee with Harry Wismer in charge of the ceremonies was a whacky prelude to the golf that was played. Dizzy Dean, making more money as a baseball broadcaster than he did as a baseball pitcher, defended his maceration of the king's English eloquently if not grammatically.

Wismer asked Dean to tell the gallery of the trouble he had with the St. Louis school teachers who protested that Dizzy was corrupting their English classes with his Ozark lingo. "Oh, that wasn't nothing much," said Dean. "They were squawking a little because I kept saying ain't, but I notice that a lot of people who don't say ain't ain't eatin' as well as I am."

THE BING CROSBY-Del Webb-Gene Sarazen-Byron Nelson foursome took along a gallery of 2000 as it left the first tee. Better make that 2001, because Walter Hagen, American consumer representative of the exporting firm of Hagen & Hagen, also followed the match for three holes before returning to the clubhouse for sustenance.

On the third green Hagen suddenly bethought himself, and took his leave of the match. He had just noticed he was toting an empty glass, of all things, and was looking askance at it.

It was an autograph seekers picnic, a celebrities-hunter's heaven. Statesmen, like Senator Bob Taft and the congressional foursome, laid aside the affairs of state; the high military like the secretaries for Army and Navy Kenneth Royal and John L. Sullivan, and Gen. Omar Bradley showed and played. Newsreels ground, amateur cameras clicked and television had a field day.

For the golf fans who could take their celebrities or leave them alone there was brilliant golf, too, as Byron Nelson spun around the eighteen holes in a flabbergasting 67 despite the rain. Gene Sarazen's par card of 70 belied his pretournament alibi of advancing age, and General Bradley whacked in a 15-footer smartly on the eighteenth green.

The high sartorial mark was set by Crosby who tangoed onto the first tee in knickers with tasseled socks of robin's egg blue, an effect that couldn't be spoiled by the rattiest old golfing cap in existence. But the special Oscar for the most beaten up headgear of the tournament went by unanimous vote to Senator Taft who showed up with a golfing chapeau of long forgotten whiteness, but rain proof.

BROADWAY COLUMNIST Leonard Lyons turned in a 45 for the nine holes of his foursome, after an all-night vigil reporting the latest Washington news breaks, despite the fact that, as he complained, daylight gets in his eyes. "There are no practice courses on 53d st. or my Broadway beat," he pointed out.

It was the combined show of Attorney General Tom Clark and The Washington Post in the battle to reduce juvenile delinquency, which got all funds from the tournament. The Attorney General whacked out the first ball shortly before noon, and proved himself a golf delinquent when the shot ended up in the nearest trap.

Crosby brought his humor along with him. Unrecognized by the police as he made his way to the first tee with his script writer, Bill Morrow, the pair was told to stand back or an arrest would be made. "Okay," said Bing, pointing at Morrow, "pinch him. He He needs a room in Washington anyway."

Nelson's 67 Tops Pros

Dean foursome, easily took the honors in the women's division with a 37—38—75 to lead Helen Dettweiler (81) and Beverly Hanson (85) in that contingent.

From the first tee to the eighteenth-hole putts it was a royal nonesuch show of golf, with radio comics and presidential candidates in the same foursome, with Charlie McCarthy introducing Senator Taft, with the huge gallery feasting on the personal appearances of the Nation's big names.

Nelson Plays Under Strain

Nelson's display, under the handicap of illness in his family at Roanoke, Tex., was featured by a wondrous last nine which he toured in 32 strokes.

Making the trip to Washington too aid the fund-raising program against juvenile delinquency, the high motif of the tournament, Nelson birdied three of the last four holes, to increase his two-stroke lead over Sarazen at the end of nine holes.

Bing Crosby unleashed a fancy 36 on the last nine to get his tie with Dizzy Dean who outscored him by three strokes with a 37 on the out nine. Dean came back in 39, after three-putting the eighteenth.

Celebs Disregard Weather

The celebs, most of 'em, disdained the special tournament ruling that they might quit at the end of nine holes and stuck it out. As Crosby put it, with hearty echoes from Nelson, Dean, Del Webb, Sarazen and Miss Didrikson, "we came out here for 18 holes of golf, and, besides, it's a warm rain."

From the first tee it was million-dollar display of talent. On and off they went, the big figures of the Nation's executive, legislative, military, golfing and sports and entertainment fields.

They came to play for the cause of combating juvenile delinquency—Senator Taft, the Secretaries of Army and Navy, the majority leader of the House, Chief of Staff Gen. Omar Bradley, Crosby, Fred Waring, Sarazen and Nelson, National Open Champion Worsham and Mrs. Zaharias, Author Bob Considine and Dean and Columnist Leonard Lyons, Del Webb and Tris Speaker and Clark Griffith, three of the Four Horsemen from Notre Dame, and Harry Wismer.

Secretary of the Navy Sullivan won the Oscar for the special official Washington championship with his card of 39, 40—79, 15 strokes better than his colleague, Army Secretary Kenneth Royall.

Another special award went to Dick Foster, 17-year-old Coolidge High School golfer, who turned in a 39, 40—79, to top the special group of four semifinalists in the Washington scholastic tournament.

Hit or Miss, Clark Clicks; Worsham's Memory Faithful

'AG' Starts Tourney, Sullivan Stars In It; Lew Halted by Rain But Not by Query

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The National Open champ, Lew Worsham, has a memory almost as good as his brand of golf.

He proved it yesterday in the Columbia Country Club locker room, where a genial old gent accosted him after the National Celebrities Tournament.

"You don't remember me," the fan said, "but you used to caddy for me back in 1932 . . ."

As he held out his hand smiling Lew took it and remarked: "Oh, yes, I do. Your name is Davidson, isn't it? You and your wife played together at Kenwood."

Bob Davidson, a public relations council here, was one of the most surprised men in the room as he continued, "You're right, and I just wanted you to know we're all very proud of you."

Later Lew, whose round with Craig Wood, Ed Dudley and Fred Waring was halted in the middle by rain, told of an incident in which his memory was a surprise to himself.

"I was coming up to the eighteenth green in the North-South," he recalled, "when I saw the last person in the world I expected to see holding the flag. It was the Glen Echo High School principal who'd expelled me 15 years before for sneaking off to play golf. He's in the FBI now and we're good friends. I ought to like him—he made it possible for me to devote more time to golf."

"If I hit the ball, the tournament starts off with a bang. If I miss the ball, the tournament starts with just as big a bang."

With approximately these words Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday launched one skirmish in his favorite warfare—against juvenile delinquency—at the National Celebrities Tournament.

The A.G. didn't exactly miss the tee shot which opened the second annual scramble at Columbia Country Club. But he could have done better. His wisest decision was to let that single stroke complete his golfing activities for the day.

Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan picked up where the A. G. tried to leave off. Sullivan braved rain, a soggy course and the autograph hounds to go 18 holes in 79, described by several as "right fair country shooting."

Caddy Lenny Robinson was unimpressed. The near-par golf and the identity of the man whose bag he carried left Robby as cold as the rain left him wet. The 17-year-old youngster left off the formality. He called Sullivan "Bud."

Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall wound up with 95 and no excuses, but Cartoonist Ham Fisher (Joe Palooka's creator sneaked into the Cabinet group) was all apologies. "The rain caused my 109," he wept. "It had to be the rain. Didn't I shoot an 86 last year . . ."

Bergen, Bing Draw 6000 At Broadcast

By Richard E. Coe
Post Reporter

A couple of wooden heads and a groaner drew over 6000 Washingtonians last night to the Uline Arena in the afterpiece of the double-barreled Celebrities program.

The wooden heads were Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, pals of one Edgar Bergen; the groaner was Bing Crosby, who got an ovation as soon as he sneaked his head around a stage drape.

Charlie, you'll not be surprised to hear, showed his NBC network audience that he caught on fast to the ways of the Capital during his brief pre-golf course stay.

"A vote for me," began Charlie, "is a vote for, er, hum, er, uh, honest government. Gosh, I never can think of that word."

Charlie also had been paying close attention to the latest police news. "In spite of such important business," Bergen told him, "people here have to play."

"Oh, yes," cracked back the McCarthy, "you mean the numbers."

Those who trooped out to Uline's for the benefit broadcast at Bergen's "usual time—same station" saw a smooth half-hour of broadcasting and got an hour's impromptu show from Ray Noble and Bergen's show-wise associates.

Fifteen minutes before going on the air the usual chaotic routine of broadcasting gave way to a brief warm-up announced by NBC's Ken Carpenter, who didn't have to resort to radio's traditional applause-pumping to assure millions across the country that the Uline audience was having itself a time.

Crosby, relaxed and lackadaisical, tossed his nonchalance all over the place, singing one song—"Cherie"—and revealing the skullduggery that went on in the locker rooms before the day's golf rounds.

Charlie, it seems, was offered cash from Bergen and a snazzy scooter from Bing, for whatever low scores his card could contrive.

Surprise for the audience after the broadcast was the appearance of another relaxed, quizzical character, radio's Henry Morgan, who saw to it that modest Barbara Ann Scott took a bow and that the house was properly acquainted with his varied sponsors.

Hardest-working was a girl who looked too beautiful to lift a finger—Ray Noble's songstress, Anita Gordon, who included "Embraceable You" and a Noble medley in her songs and stooged for Bergen in a revival of his grand old sketch, "The Operation."

Sarazen Has 70

Bing Wows Crowd But Nelson Wins

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BING CROSBY wow'd 'em, but Byron Nelson really sent 'em yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

The tremendous gallery following the Crosby-Nelson-Gene Sarazen-Del Webb Celebrities foursome "oohed" when the knicker-clad Bingle made his appearance, but the "oohs" soon turned to admiring "ahs" as Lord Byron began swinging his way around the waterlogged course.

He'd never seen the course until yesterday, but he played it as though he owned it, sloshing his way around in a splendid 67, three strokes under par.

Crosby, who doesn't play golf for a living, had a 76, six strokes higher than Sarazen, but eight strokes lower than New York Yankee Owner Del Webb.

It was a good foursome to follow and most of the 3500 who started out with the quartet stuck it out for 18 holes despite the rain.

THEY GOT A BIG BANG out of Crosby, who seemed to be getting a kick out of it himself as he kidded, kibitzed and autographed his way through the mob.

Nelson showed them the golf they wanted to see—searing drives, crisp iron shots and faultless putting. His card showed five birdies, two bogies and 11 pars.

He made the turn in 35, even par, after taking a 6 on the par 5 fifth. But Lord Byron turned on the steam on the incoming nine, birdieing three of the last four holes.

The banty-legged Sarazen played it straight, too, sticking to golf all the way and the result was a par 70, the same score he shot on the first day of the tournament last year.

WEBB, PLAYING despite an aching back, had a rough time on the outgoing nine, resuiring 44 strokes. He shaved four strokes off that on the home nine and seemed well satisfied with his 84.

In contrast to last year when he was decked out in a rainbow colored get-up, Bing yesterday was a man of distinction. He switched to gray knickers, blue socks and brown sweater. He concealed his thinning hair with a snazzy-looking cap, the bill of which was kept in constant motion as the crooner worked overtime on his bubble gum.

Just to make sure the carefree Crosby & Co. didn't fudge on their scores, Margaret Truman, of 1600 Pennsylvania ave. nw, kept the cards.

Miss Truman, daughter of a pulano-playing father and a singer in her own right, seemed smitten by Crooner Crosby and checked on him for nine holes.

Downpour Washes Out Second Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, May 16. — The Nats dropped down a notch to seventh place in the American League standings today as the Red Sox ground out a 14-5 victory in the first half of a doubleheader and were denied further mayhem by a downpour which washed out the second game.

A "going-away" crowd of 33,042, seeing the last Eeastern appearance of both teams for a while, sat in on the Nats' fourth straight setback and gloated over the 19 Bosox hits that accounted for it.

The sad part of it all—for the Nats—was that they held leads of 4-0 and 5-1 before the Bosox deluge started.

Yost Is Hero

In the second frame Boston Starter Jack Kramer filled the bases and Eddie Yost emptied 'em, tripling for three of the guests' four runs.

Boston picked up a single run in the third on hits by Dom DiMaggio, Johnny Pesky and Ted Williams, but the Nats got that back and sent Kramer to the showers in the fourth. Hits by Johnny Sullivan, Early Wynn, Yost and Al Kozar were good for the singleton.

The bases were still loaded with Nats when Southpaw Earl Johnson relieved, and they stayed loaded until the inning was over. Johnson was touched for only two hits the rest of the way.

Wynn Gives 10 Hits

Wyn, Washington's starter, gave a few more. He gave up 10, in fact, before he was mercifully lifted for Milo Candini in the sixth. Before he went out he was charged with a five-run Boston uprising in the fourth, featured by Pesky's triple with a pair of mates on base.

Wynn launched the Red Sox's sixth inning by walking Williams, after which Vern Stephens singled sharply to center. This was the point at which Candini put in an appearance and a point the hosts loved. Four Boston runs came over in that inning and three more in the next. Rookie Dick Welteroth hurled the last inning for the Nats and was highly successful, allowing only one run and two hits.

Yost, Sullivan and newcomer Carden Gillenwater, each contributed a pair of safeties to the Nats' total of 11. . . . Manager Joe Kuhel announced that either Mickey Haefner or Sid Hudson will open a two-game series with the White Sox in Chicago Tuesday. . . . From Chicago the Nats go to St. Louis for three games.

Charlie Given the Brushoff

CHARLIE McCARTHY was speechless for one of the few times in his career yesterday afternoon.

And Margaret Truman was the cause of it all.

Charlie who by self-admission is "quite a guy with the girls," was introduced to the President's daughter at the National Celebrities Golf Tournament.

That in itself was all right. Charlie was just about to speak when it happened.

Someone asked Miss Truman if she was going to kiss the McCarthy profile. Margaret threw up her hands in a firm refusal.

It had never happened before and Charlie was momentarily speechless.

Canada's beautiful Barbara Ann Scott was ready to step in as a sub but Charlie was brokenhearted (the dope).

Barbara confessed that as a child she had a treasured Charlie McCarthy doll for whom she knitted sweaters

A little bit later it started to rain and Miss Truman with that "isn't - it - a - lovely-day-to-be-caught-in-the-rain" expression, shared a big red, white and blue umbrella with Crooner Bing Crosby.

Veteran Hits Speedway Wall

Indianapolis Auto Driver Ralph Hepburn Killed in Crash

Indianapolis, Ind., May 17 (AP).—Ralph Hepburn, 51, of Van Nuys, Calif., veteran speedway driver, was killed today when his special car crashed into the north wall of the track here.

Dr. E. Rogers Smith, chief speedway medical officer, said Hepburn suffered a crushed chest and fractured skull. He was making a practice run in a Novi-grooved pistón special owned by Lou Welch, Novi, Mich., when he skidded and shot across the track and hit the outside wall.

Spectators said they saw smoke coming from the car as it roared down the back stretch before the accident. Hepburn took the northeast turn low, they said, and cut off onto the grass on the inside of the turn before he skidded out of control into the wall. The car did not overturn.

Hepburn was a veteran of 15 Speedway races here. His widow, Ada, and a daughter, Jo Ann, survive.

Louigi Chinetti of Milan, Italy, another speedway driver, said Hepburn passed him on the back stretch going only a little faster than Chinetti's speed of 85. Shortly afterward, Chinetti said, the Novi started to "weave like a fish" and swerved onto the grass in the infield then back against the wall.

Billy Wolfe and Dick Foster Gain Final Round in Scholastic Golf

Coolidge Lad Has 79 to Take Prize

Richard Foster of Coolidge and Billy Wolfe, Montgomery Hills Junior High, gained the final round of the fifteenth annual Scholastic Golf Championships yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

Playing in a foursome as part of the National Celebrities Tournament, Wolfe defeated Bob Halcombe of Anacostia, 3 and 1, while Foster downed Eugene Wolfe, Blair, 2 up.

Foster's 79 was the best score turned in by the foursome and won him the special Celebrities Tournament boys' prize. He and Billy Wolfe will meet today at 3 p. m. on the Chevy Chase Club links for the schoolboy title.

Overcoming his initial nervousness, Billy Wolfe moved into a 1-up lead at the turn, which he negotiated in 44 to Halcombe's 45.

Tied at Tenth

The 13-year-old Billy, a student at Montgomery Hills Junior High School, lost his lead to Halcombe on the tenth when he took a five to his older rival's four. But on the thirteenth he again moved in front as he barely missed a birdie and on the fifteenth Billy took a 2-up margin with a five to Halcombe's six.

The match ended on the seventeenth hole as Billy scored an easy three to Halcomb's four.

Billy's older brother, 16-year-old Eugene Wolfe, held a two-up lead on the fourth hole in his match against Foster, but the husky Coolidge lad evened it on the eighth with a birdie deuce. Wolfe went ahead again on the ninth to hold a one-up lead at the turn. Wolfe went out in 39 to Foster's 40.

Birdie Wins One

Foster caught up on the tenth and went ahead on the next hole. He increased his margin to two holes on the thirteenth. Wolfe cut down the lead on the fifteenth, but Foster moved two up again on the sixteenth with a birdie two to Wolfe's three.

Foster three-putted on the seventeenth to enable Wolfe to cut the lead in half, but on the eighteenth Foster closed out the match with a four. Wolfe's tee shot went into a ditch and he ended up with an eight on the hole.

Chick Evans Beats Freddie McLeod

By Jack Kearney
Post Reporter

Little Freddy McLeod and Chick Evans renewed their 1916 rivalry yesterday and McLeod came in a strong second in the Celebrities Tournament.

Evans, who in 1916 became the first to win both the National Open and the National Amateur championships, stroked a 71, one above par.

McLeod, now Columbia Country Club pro, made up in mastery for what he lacked in brawn, and carded a 74.

Disappointed at Score

The foursome was completed by Senator William Fulbright (D., Ark), and Harry Parr, President of the Maryland Jockey Club.

Fulbright was disappointed with his score of 85 but his partner, Evans, thought the Senator had a lot of tough luck.

Parr, who placed first in his section in last year's Celebrities Tournament, shot a 79.

Although McLeod and Evans were in opposing partnerships, and a grand sum of $3 had been bet on the outcome of the match, each of the veteran champs, tried to out praise the other.

Loses Senatorial Dignity

Fullbright, a Rhodes Scholar in 1925, lost his senatorial dignity on the ninth hole and exclaimed "dogone," when his ball missed the cup by the width of a raindrop.

Apprehensive for her husband's welfare, Mrs. Evans caught up with her husband on the 3d hole and made him put on a sweater.

Barrett Pitches Perfect Game

Seattle, May 16 (AP).—Dick (Kewpie) Barrett of the Seattle Rainiers pitched a perfect, no-hit, no-run game to defeat the Sacramento Solons, 3-0, in a seven-inning second game of an afternoon Pacific Coast League double-header.

Not a single Sacramento player reached first base. It was the 40-year-old righthander's first no-hitter in his 23-year professional baseball career.

New York, May 16 (AP).—The New York Yankees today announced waivers have been asked on Utility Infielder Lonnie Frey in order to give him his unconditional release. The 35-year-old Frey will accompany the Yanks tomorrow when they leave for St. Louis, the veteran's home town.

A Nocturnal Celebrity

Columnist Lyons Relishes Golf in Rain and Darkness

By Al Lewis
Post Reporter

Rain and darkness failed to dampen the golf game of at least one player yesterday in the Celebrities Tournament at the Columbia Country Club.

Columnist Leonard Lyons, shooting seven over par for a 45, got better as the rain increased and it grew darker. Contrary to the wishes of the others in his group he kept hoping it would get dark.

"I am not used to these daylight hours, but as soon as it gets dark I can play better. There is no golf course on the corner of 53d st. and Broadway at 4 o'clock in the morning," he said.

Leading scorer of the group was Frank Pace, director of the budget, who shot a par 38. Pace took time out between holes to do a little lobbying with Congressman Leslie Arends (R., Ill.) and Congressman George Smathers (D., Fla.).

Arends and Smathers were having a little party rivalry and, when it was suggested that they do a little betting on some forthcoming legislation, a hot discussion ensued on what legislation to bet on. It finally wound up with them having a small wager on final outcome with Arends shooting a 41 and Smathers, a 43.

Jack Harris, promoter of the Kramer-Riggs tennis troupe, was the fifth member of the party and shot a 44. Harris spent most of his time with Pace—presumably talking about the technicalities of the tax laws.

Pace's low score can be partly attributed to his wife Peggy's coaching. Once when he duffed a shot on the fifth hole Peggy threatened to cut him off from his Sunday dinner. Pace admitted that he had been practicing for the tournament.

Babe Outneedles Old Diz

Didrikson, Dean Both 'Win,' But They Don't Agree on It

By Bill Gold
Post Reporter

Babe Didrikson and Dizzy Dean finished all even after 18 noisy holes yesterday. They both won.

In match play, Diz had the Babe one down. In medal play, Babe fired a 75 against Dean's 76.

"I'm the winner," crowed Diz. "Not on my scorecard you ain't," snapped Babe. "This is medal play. Like baseball, Diz, you gotta count them all. You can't win a ball game by winning the most innings."

Two well-behaved ladies completed the Didrikson-Dean foursome, but they kept their inhibitions in such excellent check that the gallery hardly noticed them.

Blonde Helen Dettweiler, former local champ, and hard-hitting Beverly Manson, North Dakota titleholder, just played good, steady golf. The folks in the gallery kept asking "who are those two?"

But there was no mistaking the identity of either the Babe or Diz. They wisecracked, they mugged, they needled each other unmercifully, they played to the crowd—and they shot some remarkable golf at times.

When the slippery going caused Babe to miss a shot, she gave herself a "talking-to" in a voice that couldn't be heard quite a mile. When she conked one right down the middle so far that it became lost in the rainy mist, she led the applause for herself.

Dean started out with the avowed purpose of getting Babe's goat. But on number 17 he finally discovered that he had met his master.

Babe had been dishing it out on even terms with Dean, and when Diz flubbed a short pitch to the green, she let him have both barrels.

"Aw bwess his widdle heart," she gloated, "the big stiff looked up."

"Aw——shut up," roared Diz with genuine feeling. But in the same instant he was grinning at himself and muttering:

"That's the last time I ever try to needle an expert at needling."

On the sixth, Diz hooked his his drive, caught some trees with his second, looked up like a Grade A duffer on the third, and finaly hit the green with his fourth shot.

"Don't fool around with it, boy," advised the Babe. "Hit it." And with that she poled her second shot on to the green from about 200 yards out.

The ball failed to hold, and rolled over the back edge. As Babe lined up her third shot, somebody in the gallery called out, "Lay it right on the can, Babe."

Miss Didrickson stepped back from her ball, told the caddy to "loosen up that stick, son," addressed the ball again, and knocked it in for a birdie three.

Diz evened the match on the next hole when Babe three-putted. They halved the eighth, and Dean won the ninth and tenth when Babe again three-putted on the treacherous, water-soaked greens

But Babe evened matters on the long eleventh by talking Diz into a whopping eight.

Dean's drive buried itself in the muddy side of a bunker. His second shot dislodged two square yards of soil, but the ball merely trickled backwards into the sodden trap.

"I done lost 3 yards on that one," mused Dean as he sent his third into another bunker, got out with his fourth and finally poked a solid shot—into another trap, beside the green.

"Is they any traps I've missed?" inquired Dean with grammar to match his golf. "If they is, I'll be glad to go back and git in 'em."

On number 17, the Babe hit her ball from atop the tee marker, and won the hole with a par. On the eighteenth, Dean was about to hit his second shot from the fairway when the Babe sang out:

"For Pete's sake! You're not going to hit a wood from there, are you? That's no more than a soft 5-iron."

Dean gritted his teeth, swung with all his might, and flubbed it.

The Babe chortled, and pasted a terrific iron shot pin high. But once again she missed her putt, and wound up one-down on the match, in spite of her excellent score.

Drenched to the skin, she still had one more barb left for Dean: As they walked toward the clubhouse, she held out her hand, shook his big right ham, and said:

"Diz, you're a wonderful competitor. It's too bad you can't play the game."

Everyone Was There

By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

It might have been a little wet, but anybody who is anybody at all was out at the National Celebrities Golf Tournament yesterday at the Columbia Country Club. At far left, Canada's Barbara Ann Scott and Margaret Truman compare notes. Next is a real sports foursome: Babe Didriksen, Dizzy Dean, Helen Dettweiler and Beverly Hanson. And, of course, Bing Crosby was there. In picture No. 3 Bing mugs for the camera as Byron Nelson gives out with a smile.

Notre Dame's Horsemen Turn Out to Be Good Mudders

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The last golfers to tee off in the tournament yesterday—half of Notre Dame's immortal "Four Horsemen" backfield—were the first home.

Jimmy Crowley and Don Miller proved to be excellent mudders. Detained when their plane had difficulty landing, they went off without the benefit of a large gallery. Nonetheless, they went off.

And, like the good sports they are, they went six holes in the drenching rain with two marshals and a bedraggled reporter cheering them on.

The marshals—Larry Coe and Don Childress, of Columbia Country Club—pointed out a convenient short cut and Miller and Crowley managed to duck the crowd at the eighteenth. That's how they finished before Crosby and Co.

Miller, now United States Attorney for Northern Ohio, admitted that his golf "embarrasses me." But it was Crowley, who came through with a par 5 on the twelfth.

"Look, coach," he told Miller, "I'll make a small wager nobody ever will miss us."

It didn't dampen their good humor to play in comparative solitude behind Dizzy Dean and Babe Didrikson.

Quipped Crowley to Miller, "Don, the only ones to follow us would have to be people you have injunctions against."

Crowley also dismissed the missing Arcaro by saying, "if Arcaro was here, he would have had an easier time than he had in the Preakness."

Bing Sings in Rain, Risks Health; Good Fun for All

with a golf ball in his mouth.

Charlie McCarthy cut loose with a sneeze as Bing addressed his ball, but Bing refused to blow up. He smacked a good one and went on his way, followed by a great throng.

Bing's foursome included two of the greatest golfers who ever lived, Byron Nelson and Gene Sarazen, not to mention Del Webb.

However, he was anything but outclassed and he hummed merrily as he went from hole to hole.

The second foursome to take off was really a threesome, and was made up of Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall and the creator of Joe Palooka, Cartoonist Ham Fisher.

Fisher started off with a monumental slice and the ball when last seen was headed in the direction of the Chevy Chase Club.

United States Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, came onto the tee with Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff. The scourge of the Wehrmacht, talking into Wismer's microphone, said, "I hope I will not disgrace myself."

He didn't. His first ball went toward the green like a rifle shot, and he ended four strokes ahead of Taft.

As the day wore on, two huge galleries formed on the rolling Columbia course. One was following Bing & Co., the other a foursome made up of the celebrated Babe Didrikson Zaharias, Dizzy Dean, Helen Dettweiler and Betty Jameson.

The spectators looked on with awe as Babe's shots went screaming down the fairways.

The last golfers to tee off were Jimmy Crowley and Don Miller who back in the 1920's were half of Notre Dame's immortal Four Horsemen.

Their plane was late getting into Washington.

This fact, together with the rain, gave them a good excuse to beg off had they wanted to. However, they liked the cause that brought them here.

When Bus Ham, sports editor of The Post, saw Crowley and Miller take their drives and head out into the downpour, he turned to a colleague and remarked:

"Well, you can always count on champions."

Gen. Bradley, Taft Display Top Form

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Playing through the heavy downpour in a floppy white golf hat, old sweater and baggy trousers, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, didn't look much like a presidential candidate.

But he gave a sample of the keen judgment that has made nim a leader of his party, on the fifth hole at Columbia.

With his ball in a rough to the right of the fairway and the branches of a large tree hampering his swing, Senator Taft briefly studied his difficult position.

His caddy suggested an iron for the shot, but without a word Taft drew a wood club from his bag. He smacked a beauty out of the rough and over a bunker to a nice position in front of the green. The crowd applauded him.

His approach stopped 20 feet from the cup and then he drew more applause by dropping the putt for a nice par 5 on the 567-yard hole.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Omar Bradley, who hadn't touched a club in some weeks, played like a professional over the heavy course to score a 40. That despite an unlucky seven on the fourth hole.

Jack Kramer and Dinny Pails, two of the world's finest tennis players, showed flashes of brilliance on the fairways that caused one spectator to ask Kramer: "Do you think you might become another Ellsworth Vines?"

Big Jack, who interspersed 250-yard drives with some less creditable shots, replied, "Yes, it's all right to call me Vines—on every third shot."

Fifth member of the foursome was Elmer Ward, promoter of the Goodall Round Robin Golf Tournament. Ward played a nice game, his 40 strokes putting him in a tie with Bradley.

Senator Taft, playing steady golf despite the fact that he was bothered by the rain, came in with a 44, while Pails took 47 strokes and Kramer 48 on the nine holes they played.

DINNY PAILS landed in traps on the first five holes. He must have thought he was in the Sahara Desert instead of the Columbia links . . . General Bradley's beautiful three-iron shot on the second hole was one of the best of the day. It traveled a good 180 yards and stopped on the green . . . Taft and Bradley chipped up nicely to get easy par threes and on the eighth both moaned as their putts seemingly went awry only to curl in at the last moment . . .

'Mud-Shoes' Haight Finds Going Tough

Seeks Angles, But Dodges the Boss

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

I'VE BEEN following the horses for a long time but, somehow, I never picked up the knack of covering two tracks at the same time.

My boss went a long way yesterday to give me a horse assignment. At the Celebrities Tournament he told me to follow Elmer Layden, Jim Crowley, and Don Miller—three of Notre Dame's immortal "Four Horsemen"—and Jockey Eddie Arcaro.

Now I was perfectly willing. It looked like rain, so I put on my mud shoes and like an obedient Post reporter I stuck around the starting tee ready to wobble around the golf course in search of amusing angles.

But even a man of my proportions—around, that is—could not have made good. Layden was the only one of my foursome accounted for. Due to the weather, Crowley and Miller were in a plane that was trying to find the National Airport while Arcaro picked up his Preakness marbles and left for New York.

LAYDEN FINALLY began playing with some other talent. Crowley and Miller showed up late and played together. I tossed a coin to see if I'd go out on the golf course or stay in the clubhouse. On the fourth flip, the clubhouse won—lucky break for me because it was raining outside.

Well, I was having a fine time, sneaking in and out of the chow line and locating club members with moist forethought, if you know what I mean.

It wasn't long before the sports department boys began treking in from their assignments looking like drowned rats. Then out of the corner of my eye, I caught the Boss and he was dripping wet, too.

Now, outwardly, I was dry. I figured the Boss was going to let me have it if he discovered I was the only sportswriter who wasn't all wet—and no wisecracks, please.

HE STARTED to come my way and I realized I was on a spot calling for some quick thinking.

But the old Haight ingenuity clicked again.

I ducked into the locker room, made sure nobody was looking and put my hat under the cold shower.

Then I joined the others. The Boss looked at me and said, "Haight, you're certainly taking a beating from the rain. You better watch out you don't catch cold."

I always said I'd rather be ingenious than president.

NOTES WITH CELEBRITIES FLAVOR—Harry Wismer must have cast iron vocal cords. After more than three hours as M.C. he was doing the same grand job as when he began . . . I was around for two hours and nobody asked me for an autograph. Finally, I got some recognition on the radio, but only because I was mistaken for Humphrey Pennyworth . . . the television guys didn't give me a glance, but, if you had the show on your screen, I was the large object that walked in back of Senator Bob Taft while he was being interviewed . . . the little girl autograph hounds interested me. I said to one, "I've got a Bing Crosby. I'll bet you haven't one." She pleaded, "I'll trade you two Bob Considines and a

Flips Coin, Avoids Rain, and Eats

Senator Scott Lucas for it, please."

The women folk tried for several hours to crash the "for men only" dining room. The first miss to make the grade was soon in a gin rummy game . . . however, when the rain came down in earnest, the fair sex was invited indoors . . . the Columbia Country Club boys, in their red hats, did their usual whale of a job under the leadership of Chris Heurich, who can hold his head high in any company . . . Attorney General Tom Clark's driving has improved since last year while Babe Didrikson's hasn't. You just can't improve on perfection . . . next to Bing Crosby the most at ease guy around was Dizzy Dean who can have a bang-up time anywhere without a bottle . . .

In 4-Ball Golf

Washington, Annapolis Gain Finals

Baltimore, May 16.—Washington Golf and Country Club and Annapolis Roads Club gained the final round of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championships yesterday at Five Farms.

Claude Rippey and Jim Gardner of Washington defeated Indian Spring's Buddy Sharkey and Eddie Ault, 1 up, to gain the title round, while Ralph Bogart and Jerry Hart, representing Annapolis Roads, downed Ed Steptoe and Harold Hare, Washington Golf and Country Club, 2 up.

Bogart had low card of the day, a six-over-par 76. Heavy rains fell throughout and hampered the players.

Rippey and Gardner will face Bogart and Hart for the championship Sunday at Prince Georges Country Club.

Kentner Takes Trophy

R. W. Kentner shot a 160—20—140 to win the 36-hole handicap Board of Governors Tournament yesterday at Prince Georges. Galand Bowers, with 157—12—145 was second and Frank White, 156—10—146 took third.

Low gross prize went to Bob Morris, who had a 148, while Jim Kinder, with 151, was runner up.

Anacostia Wins

Anacostia Golf Club defeated Glenwood of Richmond, Va., yesterday, 25-17, for its second straight team triumph.

Low man was Glenwood's Charles Smith, with a 2-under-par 33-32—65. He was followed by Anacostia's Danny Burton, 67; Glenwood's Jim Reynolds, 68, and W. W. Seay of Anacostia and Earl Howell, Glenwood, with 69s.

3 Tie at Indian Spring

J. H. Mullendore, Charles Andregg and E. E. Hanson tied for the blind bogey yesterday at Indian Spring. Mullendore had 94-18—76; Andregg, 86-10—76, and Hanson, 96-20—76.

Preuit, Kimber Triumph

R. I. Preuit and G. H. Kimber tied for the Walter Johnson Trophy yesterday at Congressional and will play off for the title later.

Preuit scored 77-7—70 and Kimber had 84-14—70. Dr. W. D. Willey had the unusual score of 46 on the first nine and 33 on the second to take second with 79-8—71.

Wilson, Tech Play Today

After a three-day delay because of rain, Wilson and McKinley High take up their battle for second place in the Interhigh Baseball League at 3:30 p. m. today at Wilson.

Each has a 4-1 league record, and today's winner will go into second place with assurance of a place in the double-elimination playoffs which begin at Griffith Stadium next week.

Pace-setter Eastern, which already has won its berth, is idle today. But Coolidge and Anacostia, two other first division aspirants, are in action.

Fourth-place Coolidge carries its 3-2 record against Central at Central. Fifth-place Anacostia, with a 2-3 record and a mathematical chance of gaining fourth, entertains cellar-dwelling Roosevelt.

Today's three games inaugurate a busy week for the schools. The Interhighs close their preplayoff baseball season Tuesday with four games.

Also on Tuesday's baseball slate is the playoff game between Washington-Lee of Arlington and George Washington of Alexandria for the Northern Virginia Class A title. Site of the playoff will be decided today. The winner will gain a place in the State-wide tournament beginning Friday in Richmond.

Three outstanding track events are also on tap for the week. Qualifying trials will be held today at 3:30 at Brooks Stadium for the Negro Interhigh track meet Tuesday. The rest of the Washington Interhighs hold their league meet Thursday and Friday afternoon at Central High.

Saturday, the Negro highs in Washington, Baltimore and Alexandria compete at Brooks.

Keltner Hits 12th Homer In Nightcap

Cleveland, May 16 (AP).—Home runs by Joe Gordon, Ken Keltner and Eddie Robinson sparked the Cleveland Indians to a 9 to 2 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the nightcap of a doubleheader today before 47,695 fans.

The Sox snapped a nine-game losing streak by taking the opener 6 to 4 in 10 innings.

For Keltner it was the twelfth homer of the year.

Approximately 35,000 fans saw Chicago stage an uphill fight after trailing 4 to 0. Pat Seerey and Allie Clark clouted homers for the Tribe.

Flint Captures Hunter Title In Bridle Trails Show

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Picken Hamilton piloted Barbara Jo Shipley's Flint to the conformation hunter championship over one of the largest collection of horses ever seen at a one-day show yesterday in the first united effort of the Washington Bridle Trails Association and Rotary Club of Washington. Reserve champion was Charles Carrico's grand bay mare, Refrain, ridden by the owner.

Mrs. J. North Fletcher of Warrenton, Va., carried her own good chestnut Boo Boo over the muddy terrain to win the working hunter championship, taking the blues in both the tricky working hunter trials and the ladies working event. The runner-up was Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Amoss' entry, Balkonian, with Jerry Kilby in the saddle.

Reds Slam Out 13 to 11 Victory Over Chicubs

Chicago, May 16 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds tallied twice in the tenth inning to nose out the Chicago Cubs 13 to 11 in a free-scoring battle before 32,226 here today.

Johnny Wyrostek greeted Russ Meyer, sixth cub hurler, with a triple in the tenth and a walk, a fumble by Bob Scheffing and a single by Virgil Stallcup did the rest.

Cards Whip Pirates, 6-5, In Tenth

St. Louis, May 16 (AP).—A high pop fly by Terry Moore dropped into left-center field for a hit and Ralph Lapointe scored from first base to break up a tenth-inning tie and give the St. Louis Cardinals a 6-to-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

Ralph Kiner and Johnny Hopp both apparently thought the other would make the catch and the ball fell safely. Lapointe was away with the hit and made it to the plate well ahead of Hopp's throw.

Brown Captures Dinghy Crown

Annapolis, Md., May 16 (AP).—Brown University won the national dinghy championship today by staying in the lead for the second day of the two-day regatta on the Severn River.

Its two teams ran up a total of 224 points to beat out 10 other colleges competing for the Morss Trophy. Yale was second with 219 points; Navy third with 212 and the U. S. Coast Guard Academy fourth with 197. The high-point skipper was Yale's Bob Monetti, who scored 121 points out of a possible 132.

Columbia Post Wins, Bolsters Grip on Lead

Columbia Post won its second game in the VFW Baseball League yesterday, 10-2, on the Ellipse, to remain in the top spot ahead of National Capital and Washington.

In other games, Washington beat Potomac, 9-6, and the National Capital Post won over All-Americans, 5-1.

AMERICAN'S CONVAIRS ARE COMING!

Beau Jack, Janiro Fight Tonight

Tony Janiro and Beau Jack, who yesterday watched the National Celebrities Golf Tournament, tonight tee off on each other at Griffith Stadium.

Their 10-rounder is being staged by promoter Goldie Ahearn who hopes attendance at Washington's first outdoor card of the season will give him cause for celebration.

This is the second meeting between the pair with the score standing at 1-0, Janiro. He carved out his triumph, a four-round TKO 16 months ago when the Beau's knee collapsed.

Jack was an 8-5 favorite then and he goes in tonight's fray a 2-1 choice.

In their final four days of preparation here, both boys looked fit. Janiro, now convinced that he doesn't belong in the middleweight division, is down to around 150, one pound more than he has agreed to weigh tonight. Jack will come in about 143 pounds, in his best fighting weight.

Beau Jack has appeared here three times and has given a spectacular account of himself on each occasion. He trimmed Danny Papilow at the park last year and followed that up with a seven-round knockout over Sammy Angott. He had previously knocked out Joe Torres.

Although neither is ranked among the leading welterweights today, both are regarded as capable, crowd-pleasing performers.

Janiro, only 21, has made but one bad fight in his youthful, yet successful career. That was against Lavern Roach last winter when Janiro did most of his training in night clubs.

Palmer Captures Inquirer Golf Play Over Ben Hogan

Philadelphia, May 16 (AP).—Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., sloshed through a driving rain in 34-34—68 late today to skim four strokes off par and win the first prize of $2500 in the Philadelphia Inquirer invitational golf tourney with a total of 281.

Palmer, leader after the first 36 holes, stumbled in today's morning round over the 6670-year Whitemarsh Valley Country Club and started the final round two strokes behind Hogan. The North Carolinian got 73 before lunch while Hogan scored 68, the low round of the tourney.

But the two leaders, playing in a threesome with E. J. (Dutch) Harrison were hardley underway in the afternoon when the rain came down in torrents. Palmer's soaked round listed four birdies and 14 pars, dropping a 20-foot putt on the eighteenth for one of the latter.

Hogan, meanwhile skidded to a 74 and 72-hole total of 285, that meant second place.

Bobby Locke, the Transvaal Traveler, putted himself out of contention in the morning round when his 76 listed 31 taps on the carpet. He had 74 in the afternoon and finished with 291 in a seventh-place tie.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, who flies to England Tuesday for the British Amateur, was the low Simon pure with 298.

Charles Town Begins Racing Today; Post Time 2 P. M.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 16. West Virginia's 1948 racing season will be ushered in here at 2 p. m. (Daylight Saving Time) tomorrow.

This is the sixteenth season of racing at this picturesque three quarter mile course. Coming on the heels of Maryland's spring campaign, which ended yesterday at Pimlico, it promises to produce the best racing since the sport of kings was legalized with pari-mutuel betting in 1933.

Officials selected by President-General Manager Albert J. Boyle and ratified by the West Virginia Racing Commission are: Stewards—John T. Morrissey of Lexington, Ky., and Capt. Ewart Johnston of Virginia; Racing Secretary and Handicapper—Fred Burton of Covington, Ky.; Assistant Racing Secretary and Entry Clerk—Greg Johnson of Baltimore, Md.; Placing Judges—Dulany Randolph and A. A. Baldwin of Virginia, and E. A. Stone of this city; Timer and Identifier—Lally Collyer of Covington, Ky.; Patrol Judges—Danny McTaggert and Roy C. Gordon of Baltimore, Md.; and John Pons of Jacksonville, Fla.; Director of Wagering—E. H. Tuckwiller of Charles Town, W. Va.

Contracts have been signed for the use of the Jack Thomas high speed electrical camera to photograph all finishes; and for the Bahr electric stall gate out of which all fields will be dispatched by Starter Harold Holland of New Orleans.

Horsemen, after scanning the initial issue of the condition book, expressed satisfaction with the daily average purse distribution of $8000.

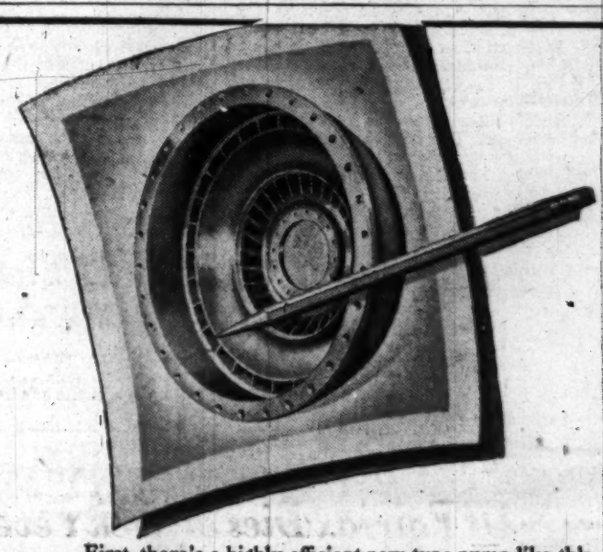
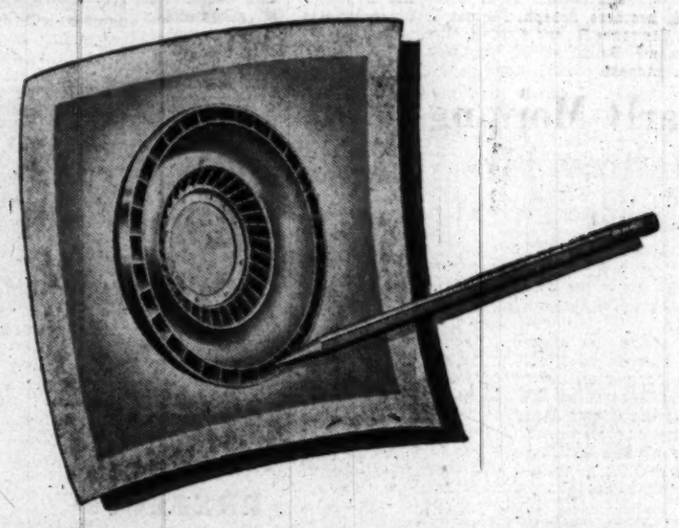
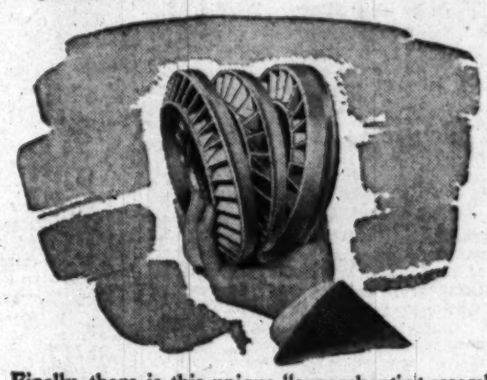
Here's the A-B-C of Dynaflow Drive*



A
First, there's a highly efficient new-type pump like this, filled with oil. Driven by the engine, it spins, shooting out oil under pressure from the channels indicated by the pencil.



B
Then there is a true turbine, like this, with its blades curved sharply to catch the speeding oil. Entering in the openings indicated, oil makes the turbine spin too, thereby turning the rear wheels.



C
Finally, there is this unique "supercharging assembly"—three ingenious elements not found on any other car. Mounted between the pump and turbine, they control the force and direction of oil to adjust driving power to different driving conditions—starting, accelerating, hill climbing, etc.

*Optional at extra cost on Roadmaster models only.

PUT all these together and they spell Dynaflow—the first American passenger car drive that requires no changing of gears in normal driving

Functioning entirely on their own in an oil-filled drum, these parts give you the equivalent of low gear, second gear, high gear—and an infinite number of "gears" in between.

When you start, they give you smooth starting power. When you want to accelerate, they give accelerating power. When you cruise, they give an efficient cruising ratio—all without gear changing on your part.

Just set a lever and press the gas treadle—the power plant does the rest. Once started, you'll never need to touch the selector lever in normal driving until you're ready to park or back up.

You get good engine braking on hills—with more in reserve at a touch on the lever. You get smoothness unimaginable—a new "sweetness" to the whole car—a relief from things-to-remember that makes all-day driving noticeably less tiring.

Look into Dynaflow if for no other reason than to be up to date on what's newest in automobile drives. Your Buick dealer will take your order with or without a car to trade.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

BUICK alone has all these features
★ DYNAFLOW DRIVE (Optional Roadmaster Series)

Compromise Proposal For Pay Raises Reported on Hill

Capitol Hill insiders say a compromise pay raise plan will be offered which would give postal employes a flat $600 increase and an average of $500 each to most other Federal workers. Also, it would give Cabinet members and other Federal officials an increase in salaries.

The plan is expected to be presented this week to a joint meeting of the House and Senate Civil Service Subcommittees that are studying the pay problem. An alternative plan would cut the amounts by $100 each to make them $500 and $400. This week should bring some definite action on pay raises.

NOTES: The Army's Adjutant General's Office is checking up on sick leave taken by some of its employes . . . The Budget Bureau has called a Government-wide conference on the employe suggestion system. The meeting will be held Friday in the Commerce Auditorium . . . Hard-working Roy Hallbeck, the legislative representative of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, is not a candidate for president of that organization. He will support Leo George for reelection . . . Public Housing Administration is working on a plan to close its five regional offices which have 1200 employes. If the plan goes through, about 500 of the jobs will be moved here.

SALARIES: Several Cabinet members are provoked at the higher salaries the Economic Cooperation Administration is authorized to pay its executive personnel. They take the view—and rightfully so—that Congress should give them the authority to raise salaries for similar jobs which are just as important to the Nation's welfare.

These Cabinet members have prevailed on their key employes to remain in Government. But the argument loses its weight when ECA can pay them better salaries.

WAA: The Senate Expenditures Committee has approved a bill to permit the War Assets Administration and Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply to be transferred to the Federal Works Agency. Its bill would exempt the military from central procurement during emergencies, and it would retain a priority system in the sale of surplus property to States and public institutions for educational and health purposes.

INTERIOR: It is nearly five months since the President renominated able James Boyd to be director of the Bureau of Mines. Boyd hasn't drawn a cent in salary since his renomination and he won't be paid for his service unless the Senate confirms him. He's reported to be borrowing money to pay his expenses.

John L. Lewis is the only person of consequence who is opposed to Boyd. He can't control him. Apparently Lewis has made a deal with Senator Millikin (R., Colo.) to keep Boyd from being confirmed. Millikin has delayed action on Boyd, who happens to be from his State.

SOCIAL SECURITY: A group of leading citizens and experts in Social Security have protested to the Senate Appropriations Committee on the drastic cut in the Social Security budget. It said:

"Social Security in this country should not be handicapped by an appropriation which is not only insufficient but crippling in the manner in which it disorganizes a successful administration."

The House action, the group said, would cut up Social Security into four unrelated and competing segements, and it would force each of them to build up pressure groups to vie for appropriations. Social Security, it explained, wouldn't have any cohesive and effective action under the House bill.

AFGE: The pay raise campaign hasn't been helped by the internal fight within the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes which resulted in the resignation under fire of James Burns, its president.

Burns was an effective leader in the pay drive and the AFGE had prestige and influence on Capitol Hill. The AFGE leaders couldn't have picked a more inopportune time to have a brawl.

POLITICS: The Civil Service Commission will hold a public hearing Wednesday at 2 p. m. on a proposal which would permit Federal workers in nearby Maryland and Virginia to run for office as Democrats and Republicans and to conduct their campaign in a partisan manner. It would modify the Hatch Act to give Government people greater political freedom. Anyone who would like to testify Wednesday and can't make a personal appearance can file a written statement with the commission.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service soon will announce an exam for patrol inspector to fill about 500 jobs in the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The jobs pay $3021 to start . . . Federal agencies must submit to Civil Service by June 1 the names of all employes who passed the research psychologist exam which was given last November. No forced firings of war service and temporary employes in those jobs will be ordered soon . . . Only 16,600 of the 60,000 applicants passed the substitute railway postal clerk exam and 547 were in this city, Maryland and Virginia . . . Air Forces has a Civil Service exam open for carpenters, woodworkers, and craters for openings at its nearby air fields. The jobs pay from 93 cents to $1.58 an hour.

Girl Who Lost Eye Declines One From Kindly Veteran

Mr. and Mrs. King with daughter at hospital

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

A former Marine with a soft heart has offered one of his eyes to Katherine King, 14, who lost her left one last week—but the spunky little girl has said, "No, thanks."

Abell

The offer was made by James A. Abell, jr., 26, of 1106 Good Hope rd. se., a civilian employe in the Naval Receiving Station in Anacostia.

Katherine, an 8B student at Kramer Junior High School whose eye was put out Wednesday night by a ricocheting pellet fired from an air rifle, said yesterday at Episcopal Hospital:

"I wouldn't want anybody else to suffer."

Her voice was perky and not sad. She isn't the kind of girl to be sorry for herself.

Katherine's mother, Mrs. Raymond King of 2131 Shannon pl. se., explained later that Abell's offer couldn't have been accepted even if Katherine had been willing. The pellet struck so hard and so deep that the whole of the girl's eye had to be removed—and no new eye can replace that.

However, Katherine wasn't aware of that fact when she rejected the former Marine's offer.

"I don't need both eyes," Abell told Mrs. King and her husband, an automobile mechanic. "I can get along with one."

Abell told the girl's parents that he wanted to "show his appreciation" because through the efforts of some kindly persons he was saved from being permanently crippled as the result of a wartime injury.

Abell visited Katherine at the hospital yesterday and later told The Washington Post:

"She's just a youngster and she needs her eyes more than I do. I'm sorry they couldn't accept my offer."

But the accident hasn't dampened Katherine's spirits. Yesterday at the hospital, she quipped:

"I can see as good now as I could with two."

She plans to return to school as soon as possible and promised her mother she won't use the loss of her eye "as an excuse for falling back on her studies."

As for Harry Carlson, 18, of 1125 Chicago ave. se., who shot the pellet that lodged in Katherine's eye, charges against him won't be pressed, King said yesterday. That's Katherine's wish.

"After all," she pointed out, "we're friends."

She said he'd been to the hospital to see her three times but just "sat on the chair and looked gloomy." She tried to cheer him up.

King and his wife—Katherine, too—hope that selling air rifles will become a public offense in the District.

Navy Department Employe Of Fairfax Dies of Tick Fever

Tick fever claimed its first victim of the season in northern Virginia yesterday with the death of Worth J. Sharpe, 32, Navy veteran and Navy Department employe at Arlington General Hospital.

Mr. Sharpe

Sharpe, a native of Spokane, Wash., lived in a heavily wooded section of Fairfax County, Va., near Falls Church. He was stricken April 28 and removed to the hospital on May 2. Shortly before he became ill, Sharpe had picked several ticks from his dog and himself, according to his wife, Mrs. Beatrice Sharpe.

Mrs. Sharpe is the daughter of Carleton Washburn, educator and American consul at Milan, Italy. Her parents yesterday were reported flying to Washington from Milan.

A graduate of Reed College, Portland, Oreg., with BA degree, Sharpe did graduate work at Cornell University and for a time worked at Brookings Institution. He left the United States Civil Service Commission to go to WPB at the start of the war and later served as a Seabee with the Navy. He returned to WPB at the end of the war and last fall was transferred to the Navy Department, where he was employed in the office of the chief of naval operations. He was a member of the American Veterans Committee.

Sharpe is survived by his mother, Mrs. Edmund Swapp of Portland, Oreg.; his wife and three children, Christopher Neal, 5; Stephen Chandler, 2, and Eben Rockwell, 6 months. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery but definite arrangements had not been completed last night.

First tick victim in Maryland was reported Saturday at Frederick, Md., with the death of John Alvah Engle, a 70-year-old Frederick County farmer.

May Festival Tuesday

Alice Deal Junior High School will hold its May festival Tuesday at 1 p. m.

Fisherman Drowned as Boats Collide

Patuxent River Tragedy Being Investigated By State Police

Charles E. Batch, 27, personnel clerk at the Navy Annex here, was drowned Friday night at Benedict, Md., following a collision between a rowboat he was in and a power launch on the Patuxent River.

Troopers from the Maryland State Police barracks at Waldorf, Md., said last night they were still investigating the circumstances of the collision

The drowning victim, who lived at 5560 Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill, Md., was returning from a fishing trip with his brother, Ralph F. Patch, 22, of the same address, and two other companions, Robert Belt, 21, of Branch ave., Silver Hill, Md., and William Ordville, 19, of Tucker rd., Oxon Hill, according to the family.

All Plunged Into Water

The four had left Oxon Hill about 5 p. m. and had fished all evening until about 11, members of the family said. They were about 100 yards off the Benedict shore at about 11:30, when the collision, was said to have occurred, plunging all four into the water.

Batch's body was recovered at about 2:30 a. m. under the boat, after two boats from the shore took the survivors to safety, the family reported, and after considerable dragging of the area.

Waldorf police listed the driver of the power launch as Charles Higgs, 19, of Benedict.

An Army veteran of four years' service, Charles Patch has been employed by the Navy since 1940, when the family moved to Oxon Hill from Colmar Manor, Md., where they lived 17 years.

Serving as a corporal in the Twenty-fifth General Hospital Detachment, he received the Good Conduct Medal and several area ribbons, with battle stars for engagements in northern France, the Ardennes and the Rhineland.

A native of Washington, he attended elementary school in Cottage City, Md., and the St. James Parochial School at Mount Rainier, Md.

Besides his brother, Ralph, he leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. and Edna L. Batch, three other brothers, Joseph, Thomas L. and Lawrence R., and a sister, Miss Elizabeth Batch, all of the Oxon Hill address.

Early Morning Mattress Fire Arouses Hotel

A few guests were routed but no one was injured when a mattress caught fire in the Harris Hotel, 17 Massachusetts ave. nw., early yesterday.

The fire was discovered about 3:30 a. m. in Room 415. Four engine companies, two truck companies, a battalion chief, a rescue squad and an ambulance responded to the box alarm. Fire Department officials said that number always respond to an alarm for that location because of the many hotels there.

Police said the mattress and a rug had apparently been set on fire by a cigarette. They said a man and his wife from Pennsylvania had checked out of the room about two hours before the fire was discovered.

Taking Count of Pre-School Age Children

The Washington Post

NEIGHBORHOOD CENSUS—When Mrs. William Nalley, 4430 Davenport st. nw., member of Janney School Parent-Teacher Association, went out to take a school census of pre-school age children she took along her own little girls. She is interviewing Mrs. Robert Burns on her doorstep at 4401 Davenport st. nw. Left to right are: Mrs. Burns, with daughter, Alice Jenine, 3 months old; Mrs. Nalley, with daughter, Cathleen Paula, 14 months. Seated in left foreground is Caroline Burns, 5; on step above her, Lois Nalley, 4, and seated on top step, center, Roberta Maxine Burns, 2. Each woman already has a child in Janney School

D. C. Mothers Counting Future Pupils To Determine School Needs Here

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

In three sections of the city mothers are out ringing doorbells counting their neighbors' children.

They are not being nosey but are conducting surveys to determine school needs for the next five years.

The three areas are considered by school officials as "trouble spots." They are areas where there aren't enough classrooms to house wartime babies now approaching school age. The surveys show just how short facilities are.

Sections of the city under study are Randle Highlands in Southeast Washington, the areas of the Keene Elementary School, Rock Creek Church and Riggs rds. ne., and the Janney Elementary School, Wisconsin ave. and Albemarle st. nw.

The doorbell ringers, members of parent-teacher associations of the three school areas, are volunteers. They each were assigned several blocks to cover by their P.-T.A. presidents and were responsible for finding out just how many children there are of preschool age.

Previous studies conducted by parents of children at the Stanton, Congress Heights and the Patterson Elementary Schools in Southeast Washington led members of the House District Appropriations Committee to add funds to the 1949 budget for two 24-room elementary schools.

The present Randle Highlands Elementary School with a capacity of 288 students now has an enrollment of 346.

Seventeen students will go on to junior high school from the sixth grade in September. In their place the school will acquire 92 first graders.

In five years when all 810 youngsters are in school Randle Highlands will have three times as many students as it has places to put them.

It is the same story at the Keene Elementary School.

The current enrollment of 393 will swell to 805 in the next two years and will continue to mount until 1952 when it will reach 1019.

Twenty-six student will go to junior high school in September but the principal will have to find room for 74 ready for the first grade.

The Janney School has 670 students, the largest enrolment it ever has had. The survey, not yet complete, shows 560 pre-school age children who will go to public school. An additional 112 have indicated they will go to parochial school and 16 to private school.

Next year 90 students will enter for the first time. In 1949-50 the number will drop to 64 but increase during the school year 1950-51 to 106 students.

Peaks of enrollment at Janney are following trends noted elsewhere in the nation, Miss Nell Hiscox, the principal, said.

Children now in kindergarten and the first grade were born in 1942 and 1943, the year that American soldiers were sent overseas.

The number of births tapered off until soldiers returned home.

It is this second crop of youngsters that will enter school in 1950 and 1951.

At present Janney has 118 first graders or nearly twice as many as it has in the sixth grade.

"The study indicates that we can make temporary adjustments to take care of the increased load," Miss Hiscox said.

"The library and playroom can be used for classes as long as we know such an arrangement will not have to be permanent."

Dr. Carl F. Hansen, associate superintendent of schools, said that the surveys will be used by school officials not only in showing where new schools are needed but in indicating the number of new teaching positions that must be requested from Congress.

8 Men in Jail Slated to Die In June, July

Some Await Reply To Pleas; 4 to Go To Chair on June 11

Eight men are now inmates of death row at the District jail.

All are now scheduled to die in the electric chair in June or July. Some have apparently lost all chance of life, others wait for President Truman to act on a plea for mercy, others for the United States Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court to examine their cases.

Reginald J. Wheeler and Jesse James Patton, who on June 5, 1946, shot a druggist while holding up his store. They are due to die June 11.

Baxter Griffin, who shot a fellow card player on February 8, 1947. He is scheduled to die June 11.

Floyd P. Wilson, who killed a store manager during a holdup on February 8, 1947; scheduled to die June 11.

John H. Hall, who raped a juvenile on October 5, 1946; scheduled to die June 25.

Shirley Harris, Joe M. Gray and Herbert H. Hall, who participated in killing a man in a sidewalk holdup on March 11, 1947; scheduled to die July 9.

A survey of the 26 cases in the District Court death-book shows that it has taken two years on the average from the time a first-degree murderer or rapist committed his crime to the time he was executed.

In Washington no man condemned by a trial court can be executed until the United States Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court and the President review the case.

Sly Sleeper Nabs Pocket Prober on Late Trolley

Intended Victim, Awakened, Takes 'Friendly' Drink, Then Keeps Watch

William Sizemore, 48, of 3113 Georgia ave. nw., awakened from a nap on a streetcar at 2:15 a. m. yesterday to find a stranger going through his pockets.

"Hey, now," protested Sizemore, "what are you doing?"

"Here," said the stranger soothingly, "have a drink."

Sizemore decided to play detective. He took a nip from the proffered bottle.

Two Are Still Passengers

The streetcar rumbled along through Georgetown, over the Key Bridge to the Rosslyn, Va., terminal. When it started the return trip to Washington, Sizemore and the stranger were still passengers.

As the streetcar returned across Key Bridge, Sizemore observed the stranger probing the pockets of another sleeping passenger, later itentified as Melvin O. Jackson, of 5523 Bell pl. nw.

Sizemore was suddenly wide awake. He seized the pocket-probing stranger and held him while Jackson counted his money and found he was short about $5.

Sizemore turned the man over to Seventh Precinct police, who booked him as Douglas Frazier, 23, of 4443 B st. se., on a charge of robbery.

A thorough search by Police Pvt. William Noonan of the Fourth Precinct resulted in the recovery of $250 Saturday night at Herzog's seafood restaurant, 11th st. and Maine ave. sw.

250 Bills Missing

Cyrus Bell told police he left the cash register in the kitchen briefly and returned to find $250 in $1 bills missing. Noonan found $85 hidden beneath a radiator in the dining room and $150 behind a locker in the locker room. He said he also found 15 $1 bills on James G. Whittingham, 43, a waiter, of 1451 Corcoran st. nw. Whittingham was charged with grand larceny.

Thomas M. Lipscomb, jr., a cab driver, of 2108 16th st. nw., told police that he picked up two passengers at Adams Mill rd. and Harvard st. nw., at about midnight Saturday, they held him up with a .45-caliber automatic, robbed him of $11 and the keys to his cab and then fled on foot.

Ben Edwards, 34, of 1910 9th st. nw., reported he was struck on the head by a man and robbed of $35 at about 1:30 a. m. at 7th st. and Massachusetts ave nw. Edwards was treated for scalp lacerations at Freedmen's Hospital.

Roy A. Thomson, 47, of 4113 Gallatin st. ne., told police he was jostled by several men on a streetcar late Saturday afternoon as it passed through the H st. ne. viaduct. He later discovered his billfold containing $136 was missing.

Two sleepers were the victims of prowlers. Sometime between midnight and 5 a. m. yesterday while Clarence Jackson was asleep in his room at 221 I st. nw., someone entered the room and stole a billfold containing $218, a watch and Jackson's trousers. The watch, trousers and an empty billfold were found later on a rear porch.

John Jenkins, 50, was sleeping in his shirt and trousers in a basement apartment at 1801 Swann st. nw. An intruder cut Jenkins' trousers pocket and removed $80. Also stolen were an automatic pistol and a watch.

Police later arrested Charles B. Hall, 20, of 1460 T st. nw., and charged him with robbery. Police said the pistol, watch and part of the money was recovered.

D. C. to Ask Police Station Bids

Building which will be constructed at 42d st. and Benning rd.

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Plans for the Metropolitan Police Department's new Precinct No. 14 stationhouse have been completed by the District architect's office and bids for the construction will be advertised Friday. The stationhouse will be situated at 42d st. and Benning rd.

The new precinct will include half the territory that is now No. 11 Precinct, and will be bordered by the Anacostia River on the northwest, Pennsylvania avenue on the southwest and the District line on the other sides.

A grant of $174,000 was approved by Congress for construction of the stationhouse in the budget for the fiscal year of 1948. A plot of land 113 by 218 feet was given to the city by the National Capital Parks Commission for the purpose.

The precinct force will require an additional captain, 3 lieutenants, 3 sergeants, 3 corporals and 84 privates. Provisions for the new men were made in the Police Department budget for the fiscal year of 1949 and has already been approved by the House.

Action for the new precinct came after many years of protests from the civic and business organizations of the Northeast and Southeast sections of the city that the Eleventh Precinct was not giving them adequate protection.

The Eleventh Precinct is now the largest precinct in the city, covering an area of 17½ square miles. Population of the precinct has grown from 50,000 in 1940 to 160,000 today. Yet the number of policemen assigned to patrol the area has increased only 17 per cent.

Division of the precinct at Pennsylvania ave. will not only split the territory geographically but will halve the population now protected by the police in No. 11.

No. 11 Precinct as it is today takes in the whole of Anacostia, and includes Congress Heights, Twining City, Benning, Marshall Heights, Deanwood and other communities in the northeast. This is a larger area than the combined area of the District's next three largest precincts, Nos. 6, 8, and 12.

The Eleventh Precinct has the second largest enrollment of public and parochial school children among the precincts of the city, and at the same time includes four main arteries leading out of the city into nearby Maryland. Splitting the precinct will provide Splitting the precinct will provide tion for children at dangerous intersections.

Plans for the No. 14 Precinct station house have already been approved by the Fine Arts Commission. The brick building will be of two stories, 105 feet long. It will have 16 rooms, a special room for holding witnesses and 10 cells for prisoners.

McLean Gardens Head Charges Children Abuse Property

The oft-embattled owners of the mammoth McLean Gardens development—already in hot water with many tenants because of rent hike overtures—drew more fire yesterday on another score.

The ire of tenants was inflamed by a new memorandum warning that:

"Continual abuse of the property by families with children is going to mean one thing—and that is we shall be forced to refuse acceptance of families with children."

One feminine resident, who preferred to be unidentified, said that from her observance most new tenants already are conspicuous by one common quality—they don't have any children.

According to Charles L. Allison, development manager, the Fairmac Corp. finds it "very discouraging . . . to expend large sums each year in grounds and building maintenance and have it ruined by carelessness and neglect on your part."

In some instances, he declared, "even before the paint was dry, the front entrances were smeared with mud, children were climbing in and out of windows and, in one or two cases, green paint from the doorways was smeared on the columns. Often, he said, parents "are watching these episodes without making any effort to control them."

Another tenant expressed the opinion that Allison posted the notices "with an honest feeling that parents would be warned to take steps toward cutting down possible damaging acts by children before the management should take a definite 'no children' stand."

The notices came as "a bolt out of the blue" without prior discussion with any tenants as far as she knew, and that fact tended to increase the tenants' resentment, she said.

She could not confirm any of the specific acts of damage mentioned, but said the management may be right although "some damage must be expected in any development where there are a number of small children."

As for the other tenant-management controversy—rents—it will be aired before the Rent Control Administration June 7 and 8. According to J. H. Mason, 3847 Rodman st. nw., more than 1300 tenants have organized a McLean Gardens Association to fight the proposed rent hikes.

Owners are seeking a $5-a-month rise for 1300 dormitory rooms and a straight 10 per cent increase for 720 apartments on the grounds costs of maintenance, taxes and other expenses are on the upswing.

Governors Board Of American Bar Group to Meet

The spring meeting of the Board of Governors of the American Bar Association will be held today at the Mayflower Hotel.

The governors board will be entertained during their visit here by Attorney and Mrs. Walter M. Bastian, 2015 Plymouth st. nw.

A meeting of the Corporation, Banking and Mercantile Council of the Association will be host to some 40 Senators and Representatives, members of the Banking, Currency and Finance Committees, the Ways and Means Committee, the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and the Federal Trade Commission.

Driver Falls Out of Car Door In Swerving

James A. Floyd, 22, of 1138 19th st. nw., was injured early yesterday when he fell from his automobile while swerving to avoid striking a pedestrian in the 4300 block of Sheriff rd. ne.

He was admitted to Gallinger Hospital suffering a possible skull fracture. His condition was reported as "good."

Police said the door of his car swung open when he turned the wheels suddenly after a pedestrian stepped out into the street in front of him. He fell to the street and his auto continued over the curb, striking the front porch of a home at 4322 Sheriff rd., but doing little damage, according to police.

Two men were injured, neither seriously, when the car in which they were riding collided with an electric light pole yesterday on Viers Mill rd. at Viers Mill Village.

The car was operated by Milton Katz, 40, of 336 Commerce la., Rockville, Md., operator of the Rockville Laundry, who suffered a 3-inch cut through the right cheek, a black eye and lacerated knee. A passenger, James Hill, 44, of Gaithersburg, Md., suffered a broken leg, cut mouth, teeth knocked out and bruises.

The injured men were taken to the Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by the Rockville Rescue Squad. Montgomery County Police said the car apparently skidded in mud and ran off the left side of the road.

Center Market Plans Exhibition Of Paintings

The art exhibit will attempt to satisfy the spiritual as well as the physical appetites of Washingtonians. It is a cooperative effort by Center Market officials and advanced students of the Corcoran School of Art.

The first display will include more than 70 works by the students as selected by a board headed by Richard Lahey, principal of Corcoran. The paintings will be on sale, as well as display.

Lahey said the school decided on the project as "another means of bringing art to the people." The exhibit will be open daily except Sunday from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.

3 Stabbed or Cut In Row Over Drink

Three persons were stabbed or cut, one of them seriously, at 12:30 a. m. yesterday during a fracas at 654 Kenilworth ter. ne. Police said the argument started over a drink of whisky.

John L. Jackson, 38, of the Kenilworth ter address, was stabbed in the abdomen with a pocket knife. He was taken to Casualty Hospital where his condition was considered serious. However, Jackson refused to stay at the hospital and returned home.

During the fight, Louise Wilkerson, 36, of 652 Kenilworth ter. ne., was accidentally cut on the arm. She and her husband were both treated at Casualty Hospital.

Knife wounds also sent Allen Dixon, 21, of 1330 Vermont ave. nw., and William Small, 33, of 98 Fenton st. ne., to hospitals in serious condition.

Police said Dixon was slashed across the nose during a fight in his apartment shortly before midnight. Because he had lost a large quantity of blood, Dixon was reported in serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital. Dixon told police he knew his assailant only as "Smithy."

Small was stabbed in the abdomen Saturday night in his home during an argument, police said with Sadie James, 25, also of the Fenton st. address. Small walked to nearby Sibley Hospital for treatment and was later transferred to Gallinger Hospital. Police charged the woman with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Rail Aide Promoted

J. Elmer Monroe, 229 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, has been appointed assistant vice president of the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads, it was announced yesterday.

Monroe, who has been on the staff of the bureau since 1913, except for two years he served in the Army during World War I, was formerly assistant director of the bureau.

Cut by Bottle's Blast

Woodrow A. Schlegel, 30, of 3920 Oglethorpe st., Hyattsville, Md., was cut on the forehead with a piece of glass from an exploding Coca Cola bottle early yesterday.

Police said he was filling a Coca Cola machine at the Pla-Mor Miniature Golf Course, Wisconsin ave. and Harrison st. nw., when a bottle fell to the ground and exploded, scattering the glass.

GWU Alumni Voting

Members of the George Washington University General Alumni Association will complete a mail vote Tuesday for nomination of two alumni trustees to serve from 1948 to 1951.

The two nominees are on a ballot of four—Rear Admiral Oswald S. Colclough, Navy Judge Advocate General; Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.); Claude W. Owen, president of the Citizens Advisory Committee on the Plan of the Nation's Capital and Environs and Milton Tibbetts, vice president and patent counsel for the Packard Motor Co.

At War Memorial Rites

The Washington Post

WREATH-LAYING—Adjutant David Kisliuk of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion is shown just before he placed a wreath on the World War I Memorial in West Potomac Park as a part of services held there during a pouring rain yesterday

Representatives of nine veteran and patriotic groups yesterday laid wreaths in a simple impromptu ceremony at the World War I Memorial in West Potomac Park.

The formal ceremony that was to include a concert by the Army Band, a procession of children carrying poppies and speeches by Maj. Gen. Carl R. Gray, jr., Veterans Administrator, and Col. Paul H. Griffith, past national commander of the American Legion, were canceled because of rain.

A ceremony is held annually by the District of Columbia World War Memorial and May Day Corporation in honor of World War I dead.

Gordon Rice, department chaplain opened the service with a prayer. Twenty-five uniformed men of the legion's national guard of honor, under direction of Capt. James C. Clark, stood at attention at the center of the open, rain-swept memorial while the wreaths were laid. Philip Domras, bugler, sounded taps.

Organizations represented by wreaths were the Department of the D. C. Veterans of Foreign Wars; the D. C. State Chapter of American War Mothers; Military Order of the World War; Voiture 174 of 40 and 8; Ladies Auxiliary of Jewish War Veterans; D. C. Department, American Legion; D. C. Department, American Legion Auxiliary; Kenneth H. Nash, Unit No. 8, American Legion Auxiliary; Department of D. C. United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary.

Annual Meeting Of Psychiatrists To Open Today

The American Psychiatric Association will open its 104th annual meeting today in the Hotel Statler. The meeting will extend through Thursday.

The meeting will be opened with a business session at 9:30 a. m., presided over by Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital and president of the association.

Sewall Key Dies; U. S. Tax Law Expert

Sewall Key, 57, a Department of Justice tax litigation expert, died Saturday at George Washington University Hospital after a cerebral hemorrhage.

A descendant of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," Mr. Key was born in Baltimore, Md., on May 7, 1891. He later moved to Frederick, Md., where he received his early education. In 1920, he was graduated from Georgetown University Law School. He lived at 3725 Macomb st. nw.

Mr. Key's Federal service began January 9, 1911, when he entered the Justice Department as a special employe of the Federal Parole Board, serving as the board's secretary. On June 16, 1921, he was named Assistant Superintendent of Federal Prisons, a position he held until August, 1922, when he was put in charge of tax litigation work in the Prohibition and Tax Divison.

Under Assistant Attorney General Frank J. Wideman, the Tax Division became a separate unit and Mr. Key was named the Assistant Attorney General's aide. He served as the assistant to division heads until his death.

Mr. Key was the author of an article, "The Legal Work of the Federal Government," that appeared in December, 1938, in the Virginia Law Review. He was co-author of "Taxation of Government Bondholders' and Employes," published in 1938, and the 1947 edition of the "Manual of Instructions to United States Attorneys in the Handling of Tax Cases."

Mr. Key leaves a sister, Mrs. Lawrence B. Elbert of Cape May, N. J., and a brother, Philip B. Key of Washington.

'American Day' Fete Rained Out

The "I Am an American Day" observance was rained out yesterday at the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument grounds.

Since the day is set aside by presidential proclamation, the District committee that arranged this ninth annual observance canceled the program for this year. No indoor facilities were available.

About 1000 delegates to the third National Conference on Citizenship were to attend the ceremonies to mark the opening of their convention here, which will run through Wednesday.

The rained-out program was to include an address by Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Army Field Forces commander, and presentation of citizenship awards to six Americanization School students—Esther Rosenbloom, France; Florence Boyko, Austria; Teodora Pugliese, Italy; Ben Craft, Russia; Erich von Heine, Germany, and Nickolas Karousatos, Greece.

The National Conference on Citizenship, sponsored by the Justice Department and the National Education Association, will be held at the Interior Department auditorium, with special events at the White House, Constitution Hall and the Statler and Washington Hotels.

Purpose of the conference, Attorney General Tom C. Clark announced, is to discuss the responsibilities and rights of citizenship. Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States, is honorary chairman.

An opening general session will be held at 10 a. m. today, with afternoon discussion groups at Interior. A Statler Hotel banquet tonight will feature an address by Watson B. Miller, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Tuesday, delegates will continue discussion groups, attend a luncheon at the Washington Hotel and be received by President Truman at the White House at 3:50 p. m. At 7 p. m., they will meet at Constitution Hall for a program that includes a speech by Attorney General Clark and the Nationwide broadcast of America's Town Meeting of the Air.

Miss Grogan Dies in Georgia; Votes-for-Women Pioneer

Miss Sara P. Grogan, an active worker in the suffragette movement here during the First World War, died Thursday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Willard M. Gregory at Savannah, Ga.

Miss Grogan, who was a resident of Washington for almost 50 years, showed her interest in women not only by her activity in the campaign for the suffrage, but also by working for equality for women in other fields, by sending several girls through college and by obtaining jobs for a number of her sex. She was one of the women who picketed the White House for suffrage in 1917.

For several years an employe in the War Department, she retired from Government service in 1918 and continued to make her home in Washington until 1945.

She was born on the Eureka Plantation in Elbert County, Ga., the locale of stories of the Old South written by her niece, Miss Elmira Grogan.

The daughter of a Methodist minister and a mother who was a college graduate in 1841, Miss Grogan graduated from the Wesleyan Female Institute at Staunton, Va. She came to Washington in 1898 to study art at the Corcoran Gallery. She also took up studies at Columbian College, and graduated from the Washington College of Law in 1904.

A frequent traveler, she visited Europe many times, as well as South America, and went around world twice.

She was a member of the National Woman's Party, American Association of University Women, Women's City Club, Columbian Women and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

George Brandeis

Omaha, Nebr., May 17 (U.P.)—George Brandeis, 79, wealthy Omaha merchant, died today of a heart ailment.

Brandeis was a director of the Union Stockyards Co. and the Omaha National Bank. He was chairman of the board of governors of Ak-Sarben and was chosen king of the civic organization in 1931.

He is survived by his wife and a cousin, E. John Brandeis. He had no children.

Rev. Peter A. Brooks

Milwaukee, May 16 (AP).—The Rev. Peter Anthony Brooks, S. J., president of Marquette University since 1944, and former head of the Missouri Province of the Society of Jesus, collapsed and died of a heart attack tonight. He was 55.

From time to time patrons ask if transit fares in other cities are lower than in Washington.

The cost of providing a transit ride has risen since the war in cities all over the country. Most large cities, like our own, have already had one upward adjustment to help compensate for high costs. Some have already had

Guggenheims' Party Rained Out; Held Inside

By Marie McNair

At no time was there any jam at Firenze House, for the rooms are spacious; there are porches and covered terraces all around the house and between the raindrops some few venturesome guests went outside to admire the softly rolling green lawn, the borders of purple foxglove and the rhododendrons which climb like a vine over the house.

In the great hall, there was organ music from the magic fingers of Kurt Hetzel. In the long drawing room Mrs. Guggenheim stood alone, in a trim little black frock with peplum and turned-down collar fashioned of ruffled rows of silk braid studded with jet, a copy of the model Hattie Carnegie designed to put in the Philadelphia Museum as her best work of the year.

Diplomats Attend

Moving through the throng I spotted Mme. LeGallais, wife of the Luxembourg Minister, on her way out. Mrs. Julius Krug, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and Mrs. Clinton Anderson, no longer a Cabinet wife, in a group of four. The Iceland Minister, Thor Thors, just back from U. N. in New York, was with Mme. Thors and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Thors, and the Honduran Ambassador and Senora de Caceres were sharing an amusing story with Col. and Senora Felipe Munilla.

"There must be 500 people here," said someone, "and I seem to know them all."

Yes, it was true. Everybody seemed to know everyone else, all were in party mood.

Mrs. Burdette Fitch at the tea table looked like a Gainsborough lady in a gown of slate blue marquisette with tiny ruffles which started from the neckline and went on down the skirt which parted to form an overskirt. Her hat was a sweeping brimmed deep blue straw with roses in muted tones as trimming. Mrs. Conger Pratt, who took her turn at the tea table, had gracefully arranged roses for a hat and Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, who poured coffee for a time, turned out with bright bows on her hat.

Conversational Sparks

Senator Scott Lucas and Mrs. George Mesta were exchanging repartee across the tea table, as one nibbled on a sandwich, the other on an individual strawberry shortcake. Mrs. J. William Fulbright was there and I met Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton, the Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder with his family—Mrs. Snyder and Drucie the latter looking very grown up with wings on her hat and veil over her pretty face.

Saw the Cuban Ambassador and Senor de Belt who waved from their car window as I was taking my leave; and drawing up right behind them were Capt. and Mrs. Robert A. Dyer, their daughter, Dorothy, who were to find Elenita Dyer and her fiance, Col. James Batte already there.

Joseph Farrington, Delegate from Hawaii was there but if Mrs. Farrington came she was swallowed up in the crowd.

Circulating around were Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mrs. Claude Pepper, the John Caswells with their 6-foot-4 son, Johnny, jr., Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, the Peruvian Minister Humberto Fernandez-Davila.

Met the Ecuadorian Ambassador and Senora de Dillon, the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Ferreyros who told me her mother—83 years old, or could it have been 93? has just arrived to visit her from Peru.

Young Conway Hunt had left his wife, Peggy, at home to baby sit, but was telling with pride of his two small children, and of the christening next Sunday of 3-month-old Betsy Rose. The ceremony will take place at St. John's Church, Bethesda, and afterward there'll be a small party at home for godparents and members of the family. Johnny Caswell, uncle of Betsy Rose will be godfather and Mrs. Rufus C. Finch of New York and Mrs. John A. St wart, the godmothers.

And who else was there? Well, former Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings, the Ralph Hills, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Senora de Baraibar, Mrs. Henry Flood, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Robinson, Judge and Mrs. Stephen Collins, Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, recently back from Pittsburgh and a Garden Club meeting; Miss Bertha Joseph with Mrs. Frank Freyre, Judge and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, former Ambassador and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mme. Boncesco, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Julian Gillespie and Col. and Mrs. Charles F. Martin.

Mme. Chautemps' costume was one of the most effective with cornflowers covering the pockets of her blue print frock and matching the halo of flowers on her smooth dark hair.

Then—to go on, there were Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, the Wade Ellises who came for just a minute; Dr. and Mrs. Charles McEnerney, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy.

Gen. Babcock There

If you'd have more, I could name Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Representative Lowell Stockman, who's 6 feet 6, with Mrs. Stockman; Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, Judge George Neilson and Mrs. Neilson looking pretty with pale pink roses on her hat; bachelors Don Baruch, Ralph Totten, Edward Van Devanter, Fred Roy, George Williams and Wolcott Waggaman. Still others were Miss Dorothy Stirling, Gen. Virgil Peterson, getting a welcome after an illness, and Mrs. Peterson, and Gen. and Mrs. Franklin Babcock, another popular couple who aren't seen around as often as their friends would like. Mrs. Frank Morrow was there and Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin with her son, Norton; also Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Florence Downs and her mother, Mrs. Russell Bennett, and well that's enough!

House Tour Is Benefit For College

The owners of six Georgetown homes will open them to the public for the benefit of Radcliffe College Saturday, May 22, from 2 to 5:30 p. m. Half the proceeds will go to the school's seventieth anniversary endownment fund and half to the local Radcliffe Club for its annual scholarship award to the Washington girl judged most likely to do well at Radcliffe.

Variety will be the keynote of the tour. Every one of these homes has a different story behind it.

Mrs. Robert Eicholz, 1327 33d st. nw., has made a home of what was once an old church. When Mrs. Drew Pearson was remodeling her spacious house at 2820 Dumbarton ave. nw., she found a number of surprises beneath the layers of paint and plaster. The date 1827 was discovered carved on one of the beams next to the study fireplace. Though the Pearsons made many changes in modernizing their home, they kept the old-fashioned entry, with its enclosed stairway, intact.

The home of Mrs. John Nicholas Brown at 3014 N st. nw. is famous as the "Robert Todd Lincoln house." Built in 1880, the three-storyed brick structure looks much the same today as when it was first constructed by a Scottish merchant, John Laird. Its pillared portico of fluted columns and the fan-shaped front portal are classic examples of late Georgian detail.

Near Oak Hill Cemetery, at the crest of Georgetown Heights, is the home of Mrs. Robert N. Miller, 1680 31st st. nw. The land on which it stands was once part of the Washington family holdings. The exterior is an interesting example of mid-Victorian design. The interior was redesigned completely by Mrs. Miller.

Mrs. Arthur Krock describes her diminutive dwelling as a "converted shanty," though its charm completely masks its antecedents.

Visitors will have a special treat at the home of Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, 1228 30th st. nw. Through her connections in the rare antiques field, Mrs. Baker has arranged for this occasion a loan of one of the few oil paintings by Hans Holbein in this country.

Tickets for the tour can be obtained at the newsstands of the Carlton, Willard and Wardman Park Hotels and at Mrs. Snow's Concert Bureau at Campbell's Music Store, 11th and G sts. nw. They are priced at $1.20 each.

Supper Party For Visitor

Gen. John T. Barker and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dixon were co-hosts last evening in the Dixon's home in the Dorchester, at a buffet supper honoring Tappen Gregory of Chicago. Mr. Gregory who is president of the American Bar Association is in Washington for that organization's board meeting this week.

Others who attended the gay reunion, were for the most part Missourians here in Congress or in various high Government posts. Included were Senator and Mrs. James P. Kem, Senator and Mrs. Forest C. Donnell, Representative and Mrs. C. Jasper Bell, Major General and Mrs. Harry H. Vaughan, Colonel and Mrs. Louis H. Renfrow, Colonel and Mrs. Carl Ristine, Judge and Mrs. Walter H. Maloney, all from Missouri.

Also present were Lord and Lady Jellicoe, Miss Madeline Austin, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Jameson of Billings, Mont., and Earl Donnelly.

Mrs. Clarence Lea Is Widely Feted Before Leaving D. C.

A round of parties are being given in honor of Representative and Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, now that the dean of the California delegation and his wife soon will leave for their native home of Santa Rosa, Calif., Mr. Lea to retire after 32 years of service in Washington.

Mrs. A. E. Carter entertained at a luncheon for nearly a hundred guests Friday, in honor of Mrs. Lea, in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel. The ranking guests included Mrs. Harold Burton and Mrs. Clinton Anderson.

Mrs. Carl Hinshaw, wife of the Representative from Pasadena, Calif., was hostess at a luncheon party on Thursday, held in Mrs. Lea's honor at the Women's Congressional Club

Delegates Feted At Willards' Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Clark L. Willard entertained at dinner last evening for several delegates to the fourth International Congress on Tropical Medicine and Malaria, and their staffs.

Guests included Dr. and Mrs. B. A. Dormer of South Africa; Dr. and Mrs. A. Felix London, Dr. and Mrs. Roberto Villa Leon of Cuba; Dr. and Mrs. S. Madwar of Egypt, and Dr. and Mrs. Alberto Zwank of Argentina.

Barney House to Crown May Queen At Two-Day Fete

Invitation to the forty-sixth annual May Festival of the Barney Neighborhood House have been issued by the board in conjunction with the staff. The festival will be held at the House, 470 N st. nw., on Friday and Saturday, May 21 and 22.

Barney House, oldest Community Center in the city, works toward the May Festival a good part of the year. From a simple May Pole Dance 46 years ago, the event has grown to a gay and colorful fiesta.

This year a children's play and dances will be given May 21 in the outdoor theater. An operetta will be given both evenings, and Saturday afternoon, when the street is roped off, and the Marine Band plays, the May Queen will be crowned. Street booths are set up where unusual handcrafts may be purchased and visitors are welcome.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr is president of the board, in whose name the invitations are issued, and Miss Ellen A. Vinton is honorary president.

Group to Give Cruise Dance

Invitations in verse have gone out for a cruise dance down the Potomac on Monday, June 14, on board the SS. Potomac, which has been taken over for the evening.

Hosts will be Mr. and Mrs. Paul Evans Burbank and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Burbank; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall R. Diggs and their daughter, Miss Alice Diggs; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Nicholas Gill, jr., and their daughter, Miss Juliet Gill; Mr. and Mrs. John William Herron and Miss Dore Martin; Mr. and Mrs. H. Cecil Kilpatrick and their daughter, Miss Ann Kilpatrick; Judge and Mrs. J. Edgar Murdock and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Murdock, and Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Dudley Nicholson and their daughter, Miss Dudley Nicholson.

Off to West Coast

Mr. and Mrs. David Bornet left on Saturday for a vacation in California. Part of the time will be spent in Los Angeles, where they will be the guests of Mrs. Bornet's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Graff.

Rings on Their Fingers

Jewish Women Plan Luncheon For Palestine Appeal

Jewish women of Greater Washington, members of more than 60 organizations, are devoting their energies during the next three weeks to soliciting funds for the United Jewish Appeal for overseas relief and Palestine aid. Their efforts will be climaxed on June 4 when a $36.60 luncheon will be held at the Mayflower Hotel, at which at least 1000 women are expected to be present.

Mrs. Henry Hirsh, chairman of the general solicitation committee of the women's division, explains that the $36.60 figure was arrived at on the basis of an individual's 10 cents a day contribution for the period of one year (leap year) in support of the humanitarian objectives of the United Appeal.

"We feel that every woman will be glad and willing to give 10 cents a day to help this great work," Mrs. Hirsh said. "It will only mean a small sacrifice for her in the course of a year, but it will do so much good in making life more bearable for those in the DP camps of Europe."

Some 700 women, under the leadership of 80 team captains, are conducting the canvass for reservations to the luncheon and for cash contributions to the United Appeal. An attempt will be made to reach about 7000 prospective givers before May 28, when the final report meeting for the luncheon will be held.

Mrs. Hirsh held a meeting for 250 team captains and key workers last week at the Woodmont Country Club. Miss Valerie Stone spoke to the group on the Palestine situation, emphasized that Jews and Arabs can live together peacefully if they suffer no outside interference. She talked of the necessity of a haven in Palestine for hundreds of thousands of European Jews. Plans are being made to transport 75,000 refugees, including 24,000 children, to Palestine this year, she added.

Serving as cochairmen with Mrs. Hirsh on the general solicitation committee are Mrs. Alfred Bennett, Mrs. Harry Badt, Mrs. Maurice Bisgyer, Mrs. Henry J. Fox, Mrs. Alexander Hassan, Mrs. Jack Kraft and Mrs. Herman L. Neugass.

At a women's special gifts luncheon several weeks ago, $192,000 was pledged to the United Appeal. The division's quota for the drive is $250,000. Mrs. Edward A. Cafritz is general chairman of the women's division.

Catholic Daughters Unit Elects New Officers

Mrs. Helen Mackall was elected grand regent of Prince Georges Court No. 1340, Catholic Daughters of America, at its recent meeting.

Mrs. Margaret Goodwin was reelected vice regent and the other new officers include Mrs. Luella Smith, historian; Mrs. Jane Moore, prophetess; Mrs. Marie Dunn, lecturer; Mrs. Claire Bolbecker, sentinel; Mrs. Thelma Babbitt, financial secretary; Mrs. Ella Chambers, treasurer; Mrs. Edna Lawton, organist, and Mrs. Ella Coxen, monitor.

Mrs. Anne Granados and Mrs. Rose Kane were elected to serve three-year terms as trustees.

Pro Bonata Club Names New Officers

Mrs. George F. Gardner was installed president of Pro Bonata Club at its annual banquet last week. The other officers for the coming season are Mrs. John L. Cain, first vice president; Mrs. James E. Newton, second vice president; Miss Doris Newton, treasurer; Mrs. Dwight L. Bromwell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank Hines, director to the D. C. Federation, and Mrs. Stuart Womeldorph, alternate director.

Mrs. Gichner Heads Women's Organization

Three Washington women were elected to offices in the Southern Branch of the Women's League of the United Synagogue of America at its recent conference in Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Henry Gichner was elected president of the Southern Branch; Mrs. Henry Green, recording secretary, and Mrs. Lawrence Krause, corresponding secretary.

Use Dark Paper To Save Dress

How should I pack my white wedding dress, so some day my young daughter may wear it? At the present time it is wrapped in white tissue paper in a box. However, I feel this is not enough for keeping it white. R. M.

Wrap the clean dress in dark blue or black tissue paper in such a way that, if possible, there is a fold of paper between each fold of the material. To guard against silver fish, which eat rayons, sprinkle the tissue paper with fresh pyrethrum powder or other silver fish powder. Place the dress in a box with a tight fitting lid and store where it will not be exposed to extremely hot temperature, such as prevails in some attics during summer months. Of course, the storage place should also be free of excessive moisture.

Not too much can be done to restore metal from which the coating has worn off. Sometimes, however, going over it with clear nail polish will cover up the blemishes and make it usable. The nail polish coating would need to be renewed from time to time as it will wear off.

Will you tell me how to starch collars and cuffs of men's shirts at home so that they have the crisp hard finish that they have when done at the laundry? W. D. W.

Prepare a stiff starch according to directions which come with the kind you buy. Dip the washed and rinsed collar, which has been well wrung out, into this undiluted starch mixture. Wring out and hang to dry thoroughly. If the collar doesn't seem stiff enough when thoroughly dry, it can be dipped again into a stiff starch mixture and allowed to dry again thoroughly. Before ironing, sprinkle, roll up and let stand to evenly distribute the moisture. When you iron it, start on the wrong side first and iron until thoroughly dry.

What is the correct way to address graduation announcements? G. L. C.

It's courteous to send a separate announcement to each adult in the house with the exception of married couples, whose announcement would be addressed together. If the announcement is to include small children, it would be addressed in this way:

Mr. and Mrs. A. Downs
Donna and Jerry Downs
1400 West Garden Place
Miami, Florida

I'm planning to attend a formal wedding soon. I'm wondering if a suit will be correct attire for the occasion. By formal, I mean that the bride will be dressed in white bridal gown and attendants in pastel shades. G. L. C.

In accordance with strict formality, the guests should all dress in formal clothes when the bride wears a formal wedding dress. Nowadays, though, this rule is not adhered to, and you will be appropriate in any costume you would ordinarily wear to church. However, I would say that an afternoon dress with hat and gloves would be more appropriate than a suit, unless it's a very dressy one.

I have a white hassock of imitation leather. How can I clean it? M. R. H.

Your hassock can be cleaned satisfactorily by washing with a cloth wrung out of mild, lukewarm soapsuds. Rinse with a clear cloth wrung out of clear water.

Is it possible to shrink wool socks? If so, how? A Reader

There does not seem to be any method for satisfactorily shrinking socks. The yarn mats and becomes harsh and unelastic.

I have a very fine quality prewar down quilt, but the covering has begun to tear in places. I would appreciate it if you could tell me of any person or firm in Washington that covers quilts. A. D. C.

There is a bedding firm on Connecticut ave. which re-covers comforters and quilts. You can reach this concern by calling Ordway 1812.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Married and Widowed in the Meantime, Woman Now 56 Says She's Been Imaginatively Enslaved by Man Cousin for 40 Years; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 56 and have been a widow for five years. I was devoted to my husband, a superior person, cultured and spiritual, but in 40 years my cousin Jack has never been out of my consciousness for long. Is this a fixation, this feeling that has existed since I was 16?

In our teens I found Jack a bit ponderous and disappointingly unromantic at times, and at other times somewhat emotional about me. He came back into my life, for a few dates, a year ago, and although I had thought that, as a widow, I would be equal to handling the situation, he leaves me upset, as usual.

Jack is a bachelor (only child) living at home with his 85-year-old father, and they take several trips a year for pleasure. A married couple often accompanies them on trips, and I have wondered about that.

She Is Disturbed By His Aloofness

THE WIFE is a clever Englishwoman, some years older than Jack, whom he has admired since before her marriage. Her husband annoys him very much at times, but Muriel and her older sophisticated artist friends made a great fuss over Jack when he was in his late twenties and he seemed to lose interest in me. . . .

A few years ago he had a business reversal which upset his complacency (so I heard) and did him good; and this winter while I was in the South he wrote me at greater length and more often than ever before. But after broaching a visit, he kept me in suspense, querying him repeatedly for an exact date, for almost three months. Then he called it off, with impeccable excuses.

I am amazed that his unpredictability has disturbed my sleep and made me more irritable than before he came back into my life, and I often think I shall never hunt him up again. Such frustration can't be good for anyone; but then I reason that I might as well have some masculine companionship, and he has been chased by so many women that he takes it for granted.

But how can I develop more casualness? And do you think his relationship with Muriel is entirely casual? Please advise. K. M.

She Magnifies The Situation

DEAR K. M.: After Muriel entered the picture approximately 30 years ago, a sophisticated older woman as compared to you and Jack, and he lost interest in you as she and her friends made a pet of him, I daresay you began to count (unconsciously) on a time when you, too, would be a life-experienced older woman, and could cut her out and captivate him with jaunty finesse.

I don't say you literally planned such action, only that the general idea was latent in your feelings all these years, and that it sparked your decision to hunt up Jack a year ago and bring him back into your life, after a stretch of lonely widowhood during which he stayed aloof.

Thus it was a devastating reversal of your unconscious calculations, hence a great emotional shock that disturbs you to the depths, to discover again the totality of his essential indifference to you.

Man's Olympian Air Is Infantile

JACK'S AIR of Olympian detachment simply means that he is an infantile character and he would be as indifferent to Muriel as he is to you, if by implication she sought to marry him.

In relation to women the best he can offer is filial or platonic feeling, and I gather he and Muriel get on well in quasi-intimacy year after year because her intentions are as trifling as his. She enjoys courtier tribute and he enjoys her social patronage and both are comfortably habituated to the shallow exchange.

Your recent turmoil about Jack refers to emotional disorders per se. In your loneliness, you are falling back on adolescent fantasy, instead of adjusting sensibly to your present age and circumstances and leading a busy life to suit, which course, if taken, would normalize your attitude. M. H.

Wise Mother Respects Child's Likes and Dislikes in Foods

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

A parent can go to two extremes of conduct, neither of which is desirable. One is to make the child eat everything she serves, whether he wants it or likes it. The other is to give him whatever he wants, whether it is good for him or not.

The parent who denies her child what he wants and likes is the conscientious, perfectionist mother, who is too inflexible to allow for any deviations from the proper diets outlined for her. She wants to feel that if anything happens to the child she can't be blamed for it, for hasn't she fed him perfectly since birth?

The parent who indulges her children unwisely is also suffering from a complex about them. It is quite possible that they annoy her and inconvenience her, and she feels guilty about this. She soothes her feelings of guilt by allowing them unwise privileges, catering to their appetities, offering them no program of her own. She feels, then, that her children can never blame her or call her a poor mother for hasn't she always let them do as they pleased and eat what they wanted?

There is a happy middle ground that exhibits neither one extreme or the other. Children are entitled to respect for their individual likes and dislikes. The good mother will see that they get plenty of things they like, and will not force them to eat what is distasteful to them.

Neither will she put in their inexpert hands the planning of the family menus. Being older and wiser about food values she will plan meals which provide a balance of food elements which they need for good nutrition. If she serves these elements in the form which her own family likes best, then she is doubly wise, for she knows they will be eaten.

In every household food is a precious item and needs to be conserved and used. The mother who is practical takes into account that the home is not a hotel and meals are served, not ordered.

The parent who goes so far as to push distasteful food on a child in the interest of good nutrition, or the one who gives the child the privilege of ordering what he wants to eat, had both best examine their motives and ask themselves why they have abandoned good sence and good judgment.

A Handy Kit

Even if you are not a good carpenter, it is wise to have a box containing nails, screws, hammer, etc., in the basement ready for that emergency. You will be surprised at your ability along that line, in time of stress.

If you wish the gelatin to harden quickly add only a quarter of the liquid boiling hot, and after the gelatin is dissolved add the rest of the liquid as cold as possible. This will greatly hasten the solidifying process.

'Fanny' Is Tardy, But Still Welcome

By Richard L. Coe

IT'S FURTHER THAN you think from Paris to Washington. Some 15 years ago Marcel Pagnol started work on a film trilogy about some characters of Marseille, with Raimu heading a top-notch company.

"Fanny," now 10 years old, is the first to arrive in Washington (the Hippodrome). "Marius," eldest of the trio, has recently opened in New York and "Cesar" has yet to make the crossing.

"Fanny" proves to be a thoroughly diverting and able film, though it starts off pretty slowly and the print shows its age. But by the time Raimu and his skilled cohorts get into their story, you'll be engrossed in their problem and the practical manner with which the French deal with it.

For "Fanny" is one of those ladies whose plight fascinates many of the best French films—the unmarried maiden who has gotten into trouble and seeks a reasonable solution to her predicament. The intense, innate practicality of the French peasant is something quite apart from dramatic misunderstandings with which our West Coast industrialists face similar situations.

Fanny's dilemma is that her lover has gone off to sea, leaving her unwed but pregnant. After some shocked, high-flown talk her mother cools down to a practical solution. An elderly merchant is perfectly willing to marry her and recognize the unborn child as his own; he has, he says, always wanted the sign above his establishment to bear the words "and son." The boy's father (Raimu), taken in on the secret, recognizes that though he may become only the baby's godfather instead of its acknowledged grand-father, this is an honorable solution.

"FANNY." Sirituky International presents the French film written, produced and directed by Marcel Pagnol. At the Hippodrome.

THE CAST

Cesar	Raimu
Marius	Pierre Fresnay
Panisse	Charpin
Fanny	Orane Demazis
Honorine	Alida Rouffe
Mr. Brun	Robert Vattier

Raimu's Earthy Genius

What happens when the boy comes home from his seascape? Do the young lovers fly from the old husband or do they despise each other? Neither. The sailor boy is a head-strong sinner, but the girl, while admitting she will never love anyone else, takes the stand that her husband's generosity compels her to remain with him.

Raimu exerts his compelling imagination over every minor crisis that arises and effects a splendid scene in which he explains to his son that the privilege of exercising the rights of a father over a child isn't earned simply by the accident of begetting.

Charpin plays the willing husband with a neat combination of tenderness and assertion—a really outstanding performance even on this aging celluloid. Orana Demazis, who had a similar adventure in "Harvest," is the girl and Pierre Fresnay the thoughtless sailor. The subordinate characters are immensely real and while some of their activity may tend to pall, it's mostly all quietly enjoyable.

One can't help regretting the evident age of the film and the miserable meat ax with which the cutting was done. The background setting of old Marseille is impressively authentic and the subtitles are quite sufficient to carry you along, though I've a notion the soundtrack is considerably eathier than the titles state.

THE OLNEY THEATER downtown box office opens today at Ballards, 1300 G st., with seats for the Helen Hayes engagement in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire."

THE VARIETY CLUB'S annual "Luncheon for Mother" is scheduled for the Shoreham today at 12:30 in the Blue Room . . . Margaret O'Brien, here for the "Crusade for Children," will be on hand to meet Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, "Guest Mother of the Day."

"ALICE IN ARTLAND" titles an original one-act musical by WOL's Meredith Young to be given tonight at the Parish Hall of St. George's Episcopal Church, Arlington, by the Creative Arts Club . . . Elaine Quarforth and Robert W. Reed have the leads, directed by Mrs. Young and Mrs. Beryl Kneen, with Mrs. Bertha Henderson as musical director.

THE WASHINGTON Workshop production group will repeat their adaptation of Moliere's "The Intellectual Ladies" tonight at the Mayflower for the League of American Pen Women.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY Theater will play its fourth annual open-air Shakespearean production tonight and tomorrow night . . . "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is the play; the Grotto Theater, behind Clendenen Gymnasium on the campus is the place; 8:30 both nights is the time . . . In the event of rain, performances will be postponed to the following night . . . Tickets at the Willard or at the door.

Party Platforms Must Be Sincere, Morse Tells AVC

The American people want platforms that are sincere promises and not "political buncomb," Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) told 200 guests at the second annual civil rights dinner of the Washington Press-Radio wing of the American Veterans Committee.

The program was held in the new District AVC clubhouse at 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw. The clubhouse, in keeping with the AVC principles, will be a non-segregated meeting place for members and guests.

Citations were awarded at the dinner for efforts last year in protecting civil rights to Dr. William E. B. DuBois, research director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Miss Ida Fox, executive secretary of the Council for Civil Rights in the Nation's Capital, and James Wechsler, Washington correspondent for the New York Post.

"The American people," said Morse, "want less politics and more statesmanship. They are sick and tired of being told that depressions are part of the price we pay for liberty, because they know it need not be so if more politicians would represent the people rather than the powerful interests."

Harold Hobbs Heads Takoma Park P-TA

Harold W. Hobbs, civil engineer, 302 Birch ave., Takoma Park, Md., has been elected president of the Takoma Park Junior High School P-TA.

Other officers are Harold H. Flickinger, first vice president; Lester J. Welch, second vice president; Miss Louise Whitney, recording secretary; Mrs. Joseph R. Kanagy, corresponding secretary, and Donald E. Hambright, treasurer.

Reuther Taken Home; In Hospital 26 Days

Detroit, May 16 (U.P.).—Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, was taken home today after 26 days in the hospital recovering from gunshot wounds inflicted by a still unknown assailant.

Reuther's personal physician, Dr. Raymond A. Sokolov, said the labor leader probably would be confined to his home for another three or four weeks.

The 'Greatest Show on Earth' Unloads Here This Afternoon

HERE TODAY, OPEN TOMORROW: These girls of the circus will be getting in this afternoon preparing for Tuesday afternoon's opening under the big top. The show, of course, is Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's, the girls are those of the Monte Carlo Aerial Ballet. This year's stay is only for three days, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday

The greatest show on earth can't offer air-conditioning, but the power of suggestion in one of its rave spectacles should have a cooling effect.

With a theme song "Dear Santa," Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey will bring a May Yuletide to Washington Tuesday in its extravaganza "'Twas the Night Before Christmas." For children "of all ages," it bills the Yuletide wedding of the Painted Doll, the Noel Gnomes' Night Out and March of the Christmas Tree.

The circus will arrive from Boston via the Pennsylvania railroad and unload in the Benning yards this afternoon and be ready for its 2:15 p. m. opening Tuesday. Matinees will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; night shows at 8:15 p. m. Doors will open at 1 and 7 p. m.

Sporting a dozen or more newly imported foreign acts, the big show adds four rave spectacles to its program in addition to the Christmas feature. High in its billing are the Monte Carlo Aerial Ballet; an antebellum presentation of Dixie, the Circus Ball, which has even the elephants dancing.

Headlined in individual acts are Francis Brunn, called the greatest juggler of all time; Alberty, who does headstands atop a tall, swaying pole, Christian's famed dogs, Cilly Feindt's dancing horses and Eldridge's funny chimpanzees on high stilts.

Met's 'Tarzan' Basks in Sun Of Acapulco

The Metropolitan has a new Tarzan film and it's escapist fare plus. This one's "Tarzan and the Mermaids" and the setting is Mexico's Acapulco region, enough to set you scurring to the travel bureaus.

It's those settings that make this several cuts above what you might call the Tarzan average. Great cliffs by the sea and the clear, cool water obviously are far from Tarzan's usual studio tanks.

There's no point in going into the story, which has to do with a villain who poses as a god. Needless to say, despite the arms of an octopus and the madcap behavior of Cheeta, all ends well.

Obviously, too, Johnny Weissmuller, Brenda Joyce and their playmates had a high old time making this umpteenth edition in the Edgar Rice Burroughs parade in so striking and sun-lit a setting. Noteworthy among the playmates is Linda Christian, the bride Tarzan saves from the presumptuous villain. This young lady has been popping up in the gossip columns as the current light of Tyrone Power's dark, limpid eyes.

Besides the splendor of Acapulco's rocky grandeur, this Tarzan adventure also boasts a score composed and directed by Dimitri Tiomkin, one of the better Hollywood musicians, so you see the boys really went to town for this resumption of a perennial favorite.

Gene Tierney Expecting

Hollywood, May 16 (AP). — Gene Tierney's studio announced today that the actress is expecting a baby in the fall. The reconciliation of Miss Tierney and her husband, costume designer Oleg Cassini, was disclosed last March.

Petrillo Invites Officials To Join Trumans at Concert

Official Washington has been asked to join President Truman and has family at a union-sponsored, free admission concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday, May 25, at 8:45 p. m.

Personal invitations were extended the officials by James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians. Delegates to the Maryland-District of Columbia convention of the American Federation of Labor have also been invited to attend.

For the concert, Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, will enlarge the orchestra to 110 men. A soloist is to be announced later.

The concert is sponsored by the AFM and its Washington local, No. 161. It inaugurates the expenditure of $1,736,721 by AFM to provide free music throughout the United States and Canada in veterans' hospitals and other institutions, in public parks and auditoriums and to help juvenile delinquency programs and other public service projects.

District Pupils To Compete in City Planning

Thousands of District school children this month will help to plan the "Washington of Tomorrow."

The results of their efforts—charts, models, photographs and maps—will be displayed in the District National Guard Armory on June 3, 4 and 5 as part of a junior community improvement project sponsored by the District Board of Trade.

More than 225 exhibits are being prepared by students in 140 schools in competition for awards. The State Department has asked that many exhibits be turned over to its educational department for use in libraries overseas to demonstrate activities of American school children.

State Society Dance

The Pennsylvania State Society will hold its final dance of the season in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, May 28. A movie, "The Wonders of Pennsylvania," shown at 9 p. m., will precede the dancing at 10 p. m.

New James Boy Brazens Way Out of Jail

Atlanta, Ga., May 16 (U.P.).—A new Jesse James, as slick an operator as his notorious namesake of 60 years ago, brazened his way out of jail today by lifting a drunk's identification papers and yelling for a bondsman.

James

Jesse James Roberts, accused lone-wolf car thief with an alleged $100,000 annual business, pulled the trick.

State highway patrolmen believed Roberts escaped in his personal car, reputed to be a high-powered machine with a short-wave radio tuned to the patrol's own frequency.

Roberts, a powerful man about 6-feet-3 and weighing 240, was captured Saturday.

Roberts was held in a cell with two other prisoners—one of them too drunk to know what was going on.

The drunk, identified as John W. Weatherly, had been jailed on wife-beating charges. Roberts got all the details, then lifted Weatherly's identification papers.

Roberts called a bondsman and showed him the Weatherly identification papers and the charge against him. Bond was arranged at $200 and Roberts paid him.

A turnkey opened the cell door. Roberts walked downstairs and out into the street.

Queen of Thrills Contest Nears End

Ellender Hits Shelving of College Bill

By the Associated Press

Senate action shelving the Southern education compact bill was described by Senator Ellender (D., La.) yesterday as the defeat of a sincere Southern effort to further the education of Negroes.

By a 38-to-37 vote the Senate last Thursday returned to a committee legislation which would have approved agreements between Southern States to share in the cost of regional schools.

"As was expected," Ellender said in a talk transcribed for broadcast over several Louisiana radio stations, "the old bugaboo of civil rights was projected by the ever-present white people who never miss an opportunity to insist on unrestrained association of whites and blacks."

The Senate acted, he said, to avoid a long drawn-out battle over civil rights at this time.

He added:

"Probably no action will be taken on it (the bill) this year, and the legal authority of the States to make an agreement of this sort remains in doubt. Thus, again, Northern Negroes and their white spokesmen in the Senate have defeated an honest and sincere effort of the South to further the education of Negroes."

Merchant Fleet Building Urged

By the United Press

President Earl O. Shreve of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday called for "rigorous action" to build up the Nation's merchant fleet.

He issued his statement in connection with the observance of National Maritime Day, May 22.

"Twice within recent memory the security of the United States has been gravely threatened by lack of an adequate merchant marine," he said. "We cannot again allow our merchant shipping to become a weak link in our national security."

Ex-GI, Former Dancer Win Met Auditions

New York, May 16 (U.P.).—A former GI and a former ballet student today won contracts with the Metropolitan Opera and $1000 prizes as winners of the opera's Auditions of the Air.

Marilyn Cotlow, 24, coloratura soprano of Los Angeles, Calif., and Frank Guarrenra, also 24 and a baritone of Philadelphia, were judged best of 800 singers auditioned.

Gertrude Ribla of New York, and Anne Bollinger of Lewiston, Idaho, each received $500 awards.

Robofsky Is Heard At Gallery

By Donald Engle

The third in the series of programs of American music at the National Gallery of Art was presented last evening by Abrasha Robofsky, baritone, with Dr. Frederick Fall at the piano.

Sergeant Robofsky, who is well known to Washington audiences through his appearances as soloist with the Air Force Band, offered four groups of songs, arranged chronologically from Revolutionary days to the present decade.

The earlier groups were of more historical than musical interest, showing a close relationship to the European style of the time, and a certain charming whimsy in subject matter of the texts. Songs by Hageman, Carpenter and Watts, representing the early Twentieth century, reflected more attention to dramatic values and emotional intensity, with accompaniments assuming greater importance in setting the desired mood.

These led to the climax of the evening, in the form of two fine settings by Richard Bales on texts of Shakespeare and Shelley, and an intensely dramatic episode from Howard Hanson's opera, Merry Mount. It was in this group that Sergeant Robofsky was at his best, for his voice has the quality, power and range for dramatic projection, which he accomplished with breath-taking force.

Occasional faulty intonation in softer passages may have been due to the almost impossible acoustical difficulties in the West court, and to his being accustomed to larger instrumental support.

Dr. Fall's accompaniments were a model for sensitive balance and musical good taste.

Jane Lea Shows Artistic Ability

Jane Lea, pianist and teacher of music at the Congressional School in Alexandria, demonstrated considerable artistic ability yesterday afternoon in her recital at the Phillips Memorial Gallery.

In the soft passages of her three Scarlatti Sonatas and a Mozart Sonata in B flat, Miss Lea achieved a luminous tone quality, with careful balance of inner voice parts and attention to phrasing. This transparent clarity was frequently lost in heavier passages, especially where trills and rapid runs were involved, both through too much pedal and lack of an incisive crisp touch.

Prokofieff's loose-jointed Sonata No. 6 was given a competent reading, with an appropriately brittle tone and virile address for its angular themes and mechanistic rhythms. However, much of Prokofieff's music demands a sense of droll humor, a sort of tongue-in-cheek attitude about the whole business, if it is to come off with any conviction. This required a degree of imagination which was not always forthcoming in Miss Lea's interpretation.

An etude and three preludes of Chopin, and Debussy's Jardins sous la pluie concluded her program.

Riot Threatens In Harlem After Woman's Arrest

New York, May 16 (AP).—Turbulent crowds of Negroes milling about a Harlem shopping area brought a special police detail of 150 men to the scene early today.

The disorders, which resulted in the arrest of three Negroes on charges of disorderly conduct, followed ejection of a woman from a grocery for alleged shoplifting.

Several hundred persons gathered in the area near the store. A stone was hurled through a store window and beer bottles were thrown from rooftops during the demonstration.

The ranks of the demonstrators thinned out during the early morning hours after a Negro public relations counsel, Neil Scott, made a radio appeal to the crowds to return to their homes.

Child Guidance Discusson Set

"Service and Needs in the Field of Child Guidance" will be discussed by a panel of experts at the annual May meeting today of all Neighborhood Councils of Washington.

Participants in the discussion, to be held at 5:30 p. m. in the YWCA's Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw., will include John Tramburg, newly appointed director of the Board of Public Welfare; Dr. William Stavsky, head of the Receiving Home, and Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Women's Bureau chief.

Hugh Stewart Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School, will be moderator.

Senate Hearings Set On Optometry Bill

A House-approved bill regulating the practice of optometry in the District comes up before a Senate subcommittee this week — with more verbal fireworks expected on the controversial subject.

A Senate District Subcommittee, headed by Senator John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.), will open hearings on the measure at 9 a. m. Wednesday in the District hearing room at the Capitol.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Absent Daddy Is Expert On Family Life

Eleven-year-old Adeline Van Court Andrews of 813 N. Highland st., Arlington, Va., is the daughter of Post Reporter Marshall Andrews.

The other night Adeline and her mother sat down to dinner without papa, and the girl asked:

"Isn't Daddy going to be home for dinner again, Mother?"

"No, dear, he's working."

"He hasn't been home for dinner for a week now. What's he working on?"

Mrs. Andrews sighed with a resignation known only to the wives of newspapermen, and replied:

ADD PICNIC SPOTS

It's called Cliffside Cabins, and it's located at Harpers Ferry, W. Va.

Nate says it has a beautiful picnic area, tables, outdoor fireplace and all the trimmings, and that the fees are nominal.

The food is recommended by Duncan Hines, and the cabins are furnished in modern manner. If you want to stay overnight, you'd better make sure in advance that they have room for you.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two housebroken male kittens." (Columbia 3007).

"Female dog, mostly fox terrier; knows some tricks; neighborhood favorite." (Georgia 3378).

"Six-week-old kittens — seven males, four females; also several grown cats." (Metropolitan 7976 between 8:45 a. m. and 4:45 p. m., weekdays).

"Coal-black mother cat and three of the cutest little black kittens." (Woodley 2255.)

"Momma cat and 6-week-old kitten." (Wisconsin 1157, evenings.)

MISCELLANY

Edna Miller of 5434 Taylor st., Bladensburg, Md., disagrees with my comments on local traffic and says she thinks we're doing as well as most comparable cities on the East Coast. "It seems to me," she says, "that our biggest traffic problem is created by the out-of-town drivers—and we've got to expect lots of them so long as this is the Nation's Capital" . . . Commenting on congressional arguments over home rule, Constance Steel of 1743 P st. nw. hits the nail on the head with: "They say it would violate the Constitution to let us vote. But I notice that their adherence to American traditions doesn't stop them from taxing us—and it seems to me that the Declaration of Independence had something to say about 'imposing taxes on us without our consent.'" . . . Harvey A. Bleam of 219 E st. nw. (Metropolitan 3315) is trying to locate a copy of an English translation of "Nathan the Wise" . . . Pied Type Dept.: Mrs. D. Dalziel of 6032 Brooke dr., Falls Church, Va., sends in a classified ad from an afternoon contemporary. It offers a summer bungalow at Bay Ridge, Md., "a 21-day drive" from here, and Mrs. Dalziel wonders if they mean by ox cart . . . J. L. Donahue of 1529 O st. nw. prefers a Washington Post real estate ad which begins: "Three blocks passed Chevy Chase Circle." Comments Donahue: "It must have been quite a sight" . . . And Mrs. W. S. Egbert of 4103 31st st., Mount Rainier, Md., can't help but wonder about the man who was charged with

"leaving the scent of an accident" . . . Did you notice the Statler sign the other day, when it read "TATLER"?

EXPLANATION (?)

Several District Liners, on learning that Big Chief Wind Bag was "Cairo," asked me to find out how the clews are supposed to fit the answer. Here is NBC's alleged explanation:

Cairo is big. It is the capital of Egypt—therefore its "chief" city. (Oh, my aching back!) Cairo is spelled C-air-o, so it's a C and O with air between, or a windbag. (Yipe!) In newspaper parlance, "30" means "finish" or "end." Therefore "that's all, that's all I will say" means 30 30—and if you look at an atlas you'll discover through your tears that Cairo is at the intersection of the 30th meridian and the 30th parallel.

This is such utter drivel, and has wasted so many countless hours for millions of listeners, that this department hereby makes a firm resolution:

They can look for walking men, talking men, windbags, and the entire Hush family including Aunt Minnie until they're blue in the face. I'm off radio contests for life.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

If you think the idea behind the song hit, "I'm My Own Grandpa" is new, lend an ear to Doug Smiley of 2611 Franklin st. ne.

Doug used to be city editor of the Bedford (Ind.) Daily Mail. The other day he dug down into his files and came up with a yellowed edition dated August 8, 1927.

It carried the same rigmarole about a poor guy who wound up as his own grandfather. And Doug suspects that it wasn't a new story, even then.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Bert Whittington, Supreme Court press officer, says he's still puzzling over this headline which appeared in one of our afternoon contemporaries several days ago:

Slain CIO Official's Daughter To Be Quizzed Again Today

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Lord Beaverbrook was given a dinner by some of his distinguished former employes—Frank Owen, editor of the Mail; Michael Foote, the M.P. and Daily Herald columnist, and former columnist Tom Driberg, M. P. . . . Driberg told of the day he referred to himself in his column as "a Daily Express wage-slave" . . . The next day Beaverbrook sent a memo to his editor: "If there are any wage-slaves on the Daily Express, free them."

The daughter born to Russel Crouse and the former Ann Erskine at Leroy Sanitarium has been named Lindsay Ann Crouse, Crouse, of the writing-producing team of Lindsay & Crouse, issued a statement to his friends, "I deny that this is a press stunt for Lindsay & Crouse's 'Life With Mother,' which goes into rehearsal on Monday."

The editors of This Week magazine bought a mystery story called "The Life and Death of Harry," scheduled for publication June 20. The editors then discovered that publication date is also the week of the Republican National Convention, and feared that readers might jump to the conclusion that the story is about a certain candidate whose first name is Harry . . . The editors therefore changed the principal character's name from Harry to Eddie, and made the title "The Life and Death of Eddie." They selected Eddie because a check through the names of all presidential candidates showed no Eddies among them.

George Jessel had two screen writers under contract to him at Twentieth Century-Fox studios. They both submitted finished manuscripts which were amazingly alike in every important detail. Jessel called both writers to his office. They insisted that they hadn't known of the other's story and that they never had met before . . . "Gentlemen," Jessel told them, "if I were to see two blue men, each with one ear and carrying 15-ton yachts on their heads, I'd say it was a coincidence. But this? No."

U. S. Lax in Psychological War

By Drew Pearson

The most important, neglected chapter of war-prevention today is psychological warfare. You can call this propaganda, softening-the-enemy-from-the-rear, or just plain winning friends. But the real fact is that this job of selling ideas, of making the people of another country believe in you, of winning the Russian people over to the U.S.A., has become almost the most important phase of modern peace and modern warfare.

Actually it boils down to the art of making it difficult for the 14 men in the Kremlin to declare war by persuading the Russian people that they themselves don't want war. At present, the Kremlin can take Russia into war overnight and the people have nothing to say about it. That is why the present impasse with Russia is so dangerous.

Meanwhile, psychological warfare has been woefully neglected. It has been neglected partly because a Republican Congress slashed the funds of the State Department's propaganda division; partly because the State Department itself has lacked resourcefulness and vision.

Pearson

Note: Today, an A-1 man, George Allen, has taken over this division, but he is still short of cash and barely had a chance to get started.

Most significant reaction to the Molotov note-exchange was the way the Russian people gobbled up the newspapers that morning. The newsstands were cleaned out. The news bulletin boards had more eager spectators than ever.

In other words, peaceful negotiations with the United States was hot, burning news. People ate it up. In other words also, the Russian people don't want war.

However, now that we have slapped the Russians down with statements that we don't want to talk over our problems, the job of psychological warfare becomes all the more important. You can imagine what the Moscow propaganda machine will do with the Truman-Marshall statements discouraging a conference with the Russians. They'll say: "We told you so. You see, the Americans don't want to talk peace. They're only interested in war."

Last month several thousand Americans pitched in to send friendly messages to the Italian people on the eve of their election. It was the greatest demonstration of "psychological warfare" the world has ever seen.

Actually "psychological warfare" is the wrong term, unless you think in terms of the cold war. But anyway it was a case where Americans wrote several million letters to Italy, sent short-wave radio broadcasts to Italy, got up a special message signed by prominent citizens to the Italian people.

It was a case where the American people and the American Government pulled together, with results highly gratifying to all.

During that election and since, a Make-Democracy-Live contest has been conducted by short-wave radio to the Italian people, in cooperation with the World-Wide Broadcasting Foundation, the Voice of America, and a dozen or so patriotic businessmen who have contributed prizes. Italian essays on making democracy live have been pouring in at the rate of several thousand a week.

When this column recently proposed a similar friendship propaganda drive to win over the Russian people, all sorts of Americans volunteered to cooperate. F. W. Danner, a printer of Akron, Ohio, patriotically volunteered to print free, a million copies of any propaganda message to be sent the Russian people.

The United States Time Corp. also volunteered a large number of Ingersoll Mickey Mouse watches to go along with any propaganda messages to Russia. The Harman Watch Co. has offered the same. The Schutter Candy Co. of Chicago volunteered a million candy bars, while John Paul Jones of Franklin, Pa., offered 1200 pounds of candy.

In Germany, after VE-Day, the Russians went wild over wrist watches, especially Mickey Mouse watches. In Austria large numbers of the Red army have deserted—largely because they have come to realize the benefits of western civilization. Even Austria, war-torn and tawdry as it is right now, looks a lot better than Russian communism.

So one of our problems is to let the Russian people realize that our much criticized capitalism has a lot of advantages they don't know about, and second, that we're not anxious to ram anything down any nation's throat—except peace.

And if some wrist watches, or Sears-Roebuck catalogues, or candy or some other kind of propaganda dropped over or smuggled into Russia would help, let's try it.

And if the State Department is sitting on its hands because it's hamstrung for propaganda funds, I know a lot of Americans who will gladly contribute or cooperate in every way possible. They feel more deeply than our diplomats can ever imagine about the dangers of war and our hopes for peace. And while they are willing to pay taxes to build up a big air force and any other rearmament necessary, they also want more done than mere negative defense. They want to see concrete, continuous, positive steps taken to head off war.

As long as the Kremlin knows that 180 million Russians will unflinchingly obey the order to march—without congressional debate, without criticism, and without knowing anything about the issues—then war remains an ever-present danger.

What the State Department is doing to head off this danger cannot be seen even with a microscope.

The famous motto appearing above was written by Herodotus. It amply expresses the spirit of the Post Office Department toward its responsibility of maintaining postal service at all times . . . in spite of all hazards.

THIS WEEK THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE Post Office Department

NOW CELEBRATING THE 30TH ANNIVERSARY OF AIR MAIL DELIVERY

The Post Office Department . . . established, in 1775 . . . had Benjamin Franklin as its first head. Previously, he served in a similar capacity for the Colonies while they were under the British Crown. To Franklin belongs much credit for establishing a sound postal service in America. His annual salary was $1,000.

The Post Office Department . . . today employs over seven thousand persons . . . who supervise the administration of the world's largest public utility . . . watching over the handling of thirty-eight billion pieces of mail annually . . . overseeing the nearly four hundred fifty thousand persons engaged in postal work all over the United States and its possessions.

The Post Office Department . . . inaugurated the use of adhesive postage stamps in 1847. At that time the rate of postage for a letter was six cents for a distance up to thirty miles . . . which increased to a maximum of twenty-five cents for more than four hundred miles . . . a sharp contrast to the modest rates we pay today.

The Post Office Department . . . is now celebrating the 30th anniversary of Air Mail Service.
The first air mail was flown between Washington and New York on May 15, 1918. President Woodrow Wilson inaugurated the first flight from Potomac Park, the site of which is now the polo grounds. The Postmaster General at that time was Albert S. Burleson and the Postmaster of Washington was Merritt O. Chance. Franklin D. Roosevelt, then Assistant Secretary of Navy, accompanied President Wilson to the site of the first flight of air mail on that day in East Potomac Park. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, 772,185,070 pieces of domestic air mail were flown. The number of air mail planes in 1918 was 8. Today there are 796 (these are domestic routes only). The total revenue for air mail from 1918 to 1947 was $538,756,000.

Since before the dawn of written history, Man has sought to improve the means of communication with his fellows. Early Greeks scratched messages on bronze tablets, which were carried by special riders astride swift horses . . . and over two thousand years later one of the fastest means of communication was still by horse, the Pony Express across our western plains and mountains to California. Today, it is possible for anyone to mail a letter anywhere in this country . . . and know that it will reach its destination with the least possible delay. We have come to take this service for granted . . . which is in itself a tribute to the confidence we place in our Post Office Department. Post Office workers have long played an important part in the general scheme of our national life. Woodrow Wilson and Charles Eliot, while serving as presidents of two of our great universities, summed up the contribution of the Post Office worker to mankind in a jointly-composed poem:

Consoler of the lonely
Bond of the scattered family
Enlarger of the common life
Carrier of news and knowledge
Instrument of trade and industr
Promoter of mutual acquaintan
Of peace and of good will Among men and nations."
